MEXICAN RELIGIOUS STRIFE SETTLED

CHURCH AGREEMENT WITH GOVERNMENT ENDS LONG DISCORD

Catholics To Begin Services Not Later Than June 29.

MEXICO CITY, June 22.—The long standing religious strife between the Mexican government and the Catholic Church has been settled.

Religious services with priests in charge will resume in Mexican Catholic churches not later than June 29.

The working agreement between the Mexican government and the Catholic church leaves the Mexican religious laws, to which the Catholics had objected, in force, but allows interpretation of the most contested points in such a manner as to remove friction between the government and the church authorities.

The interpretation made by President Emilio Portes Gil in his statement announcing the agreement includes three principal points:

1. That the government can require the registration of those priests only who have been duly named by the hierarchical superior of the religious creed in question.

2. That ministers of any religion may teach their doctrines to Mexican adults and children within the confines of their churches when attendance is specifically for the purpose.

3. That all citizens have the right to petition the repeal, amendment or passage of any law, and that therefore the members of any church may apply to the proper authorities for such action.

While not the final settlement hoped for between the church and the state, the agreement announced by President Portes Gil and Archbishop Leopoldo Ruiz Y Flores was regarded by both as definitely ending the discord that has existed since 1926, when the religious laws went into effect.

The president, however, described the agreement as "a basis for settlement." Further negotiations will be carried on, it was understood, to smooth out the slightest differences, after which written agreement will be drawn up.

In announcing the agreement, Portes Gil said the Mexican constitution and laws were not aimed at any church and that his administration had attempted to enforce them without partiality. He disclaimed any intention by the government of interfering with the spiritual functions of any church.

Portes Gil said that Archbishop Ruiz Y Flores and Bishop Pasqual Diaz, who assisted in the negotiations, assured him the Catholic clergy in Mexico were patriotic and wished to resume public worship if they could do so consistently with their loyalty toward the republic and their consciences.

MORE MORE NN N

The archbishop referred to the "spirit of mutual goodwill" observed in the negotiations with the president, and hoped that the same spirit would be manifested by the people.

Only a few hours after the two statements were issued, the Mexican interior department announced that all Catholics who were prisoners in Mexico City jails would be released.

In addition, the department said it had ordered a full report regarding the state of churches in all sections of the country where local supervisors are in charge.

The agreement was announced after two weeks of conferences between the president and the papal emissaries following the churchmen's arrival from the United States, where they had gone when the religious laws were made effective three years ago.

The terms were agreed upon last Saturday and forwarded to Vatican City for the approval of Pope Pius XI. The announcement was withheld until word was received from him.

Five men, in addition to the three negotiators, were credited with taking leading parts in the events leading up to the agreement.

They were former President Plutarco Elias Calles, who himself signed the proclamation making the laws effective; United States Ambassador Dwight W. Morrow, Dr. Edmund A. Walsh, vice president of Georgetown University, Washington; Father John Burke of the National Catholic Welfare Council, Washington, and Miguel Cruchaga, former Chilean ambassador to Washington.

Catholics in Mexico were convinced that Ambassador Morrow's part was greater than that of any other outside the actual conferences. He was credited with spurring both sides on toward peace whenever negotiations appeared lagging.

SPANISH FLYERS ARE REPORTED AT AZORES ON AMERICAN FLIGHT

Plane Was Overdue; Hydroplane Distance Record At Stake

MADRID, June 22.—Unconfirmed wireless reports received from Horta, Azores Islands, stated unofficially that Commander Ramon Franco and his three companions aboard the hydroplane Dornier No. 16 arrived in the Azores at 8 a. m. today (6 a. m. E. S. T.). The reports did not note the place of landing or the source of the purported information.

HORTA, Azores, June 22.—Commander Ramon Franco and his three flight companions aboard the Spanish trans - Atlantic hydroplane Dornier No. 16 were several hours overdue here today enroute from Spain to the United States.

No word had been received from the plane at the local radio station up to an early hour today. The wireless operators have been on constant duty during the night and today in the hope of establishing direct communication with the fliers.

But in spite of the fact that the plane was late in arriving here, where they intend to refuel for the long journey to New York, no anxiety was felt here for their safety.

A motor boat was standing ready to assist in the landing, if necessary. The officials of the airport also were ready to give the fliers whatever assistance they may need during their brief stay on the island.

Advices from Spain said that Franco, who had made a successful flight across the South Atlantic in 1926, expects to make the flight from here to New York — 2391 miles—in twenty-three hours and thus better the hydroplane distance record, which is 1925 for twenty-four hours.

IN DRY KILLING

Deputy Sheriff George Johnson, above, of Newport, Ark., faces a first degree murder charge in connection with the shooting of Glenn Quay, 22, of Thayer, Mo. Johnson is said to have shot the youth when he attempted to escape being arrested on a charge of possessing liquor. Johnson declares his gun discharged accidentally.

LIQUOR SMUGGLING DEFIES AUTHORITY LOWMAN DECLARES

Treasury Officer Explains Drive Along Border

WASHINGTON, June 22.—Extensive smuggling of liquor into this country across the Canadian border line by "international criminals" constitutes a direct challenge to this government's integrity which the United States cannot overlook, Assistant Treasury Secretary Seymour Lowman said today.

Defiance of the United States government, and not the amount of liquor brought in under cover of darkness by rum runners, is the real reason for the administration's present anti-smuggling drive in the Detroit sector, he said.

"While it is true most of the good liquor consumed in this country comes from Canada, the total amount smuggled is insignificant when compared with the total illicitly manufactured and transported within our borders," Lowman said.

Lowman said liquor brought in across the northern boundary last year was valued at about $24,000,000 or an equivalent of less than a gill each for the 120,000,000 persons in the United States. The fact that smuggling has increased steadily in recent years presents the administration with a major problem in prohibition enforcement regardless of the amount involved, he added.

FOUR ACQUITTED IN VOTE FRAUD TRIAL

CLEVELAND, June 22.—Another vote fraud trial defeat for the state had been chalked up today with acquittal of four former primary election booth workers.

The four were Nick Vitantonio, George Argie, Mike Fatica and Lucian Radio. A jury of eight men and four women found them not guilty of ballot box stuffing after less than three hours deliberation.

Acquittal of the four marked the close of eight trials growing out of a special grand jury investigation into the conduct of the August primary in Cuyahoga County.

EAST FACES MILDER WEATHER; THREE DIE

NEW YORK, June 22.—The metropolis and the East faced milder summer weather today, with a hint, however, of increasing heat in the early hours. Predictions for Sunday were for cloudy weather.

Despite the moderate weather yesterday three more "weather deaths" were recorded—two from drowning and one from heart trouble aggravated by the weather.

FORDS UNHURT IN POWDER BLAST

NEW YORK, June 22.— Henry Ford and his son Edsel had a close escape from splintered glass when a photographer's flashlight powder exploded on a pier where the Cunard liner Berengaria had docked.

Henry Ford had gone to the pier yesterday to meet Edsel, his wife and two children, all of whom were returning from Europe. John Schutz was among the photographers who asked the Ford party to pose. They consented, but suddenly there was a roar and the air was filled with shattered glass.

Schutz accidentally had pulled "the trigger" of his flashlight gun or a spark had dropped into the glass container in which he carried the flashlight powder. Ten persons, many of them standing further away from Schutz than the Ford party was, were injured. None of the Fords was touched by the glass.

GIRL'S ENDURANCE FLIGHT IS FAILURE

ROOSEVELT FIELD, N. Y., June 22.—The attempt of Miss Viola Gentry to set an endurance flight record for light planes ended unsuccessfully last night when she was unable to make contact with the plane that was to have aided in refueling operations.

Miss Gentry, former holder of the women's endurance flight record, was accompanied by Charles W. Parkhurst in a Warner-motored biplane, "The Answer." They stayed aloft nine hours and thirty eight minutes.

DR. STRESEMANN IS SUDDENLY STRICKEN

BERLIN, June 22.—Dr. Gustav Stresemann, German foreign minister, was forced to cancel an important speech before the Reichstag scheduled for today when he was suddenly stricken with cramps in the legs.

The foreign minister was to have spoken on the reparations question and on evacuation of the Rhineland by allied troops.

LUTHERAN COLLEGE HEAD FLAYS SHOOTINGS BY DRY OFFICERS

RIVER FOREST, Ill., June 22.—Pointing out that the Bible does not forbid moderate use of beer and wines, Dr. W. C. Korn, president of the Rivercrest Concordia College, condemned the "criminal practice of prohibition officers in shooting down innocent citizens" in an address before the Missouri synod of the Evangelical Lutheran Church in session here.

"We do not believe in the principles that underlie the Volstead law," Dr. Korn told the delegates. "The Bible does not forbid moderate use of beer and wines. Why should a government or an individual do so? That is a personal matter.

"While the Lutheran Church is not in sympathy with the Volstead law, it does believe that honest laws should be enforced," he continued. "But such enforcement must be legal in itself. The dry shootings are sheer murder. Killing transgressors of the Volstead act without a fair trial is unbiblical, unAmerican and uncivilized."

The shooting of Henry Virkula at International Falls was termed inexcusable by the speaker.

NOAH BEERY BEATS FLOOD CONTROL

HOLLYWOOD, June 22.—Armed guards that Noah Beery stationed on his San Fernando Valley property to prevent county authorities from constructing a flood control channel on the land were standing at ease today.

The movie actor won a preliminary skirmish yesterday when his armed guards "repulsed" an invading group of county surveyors.

As the surveyors neared the Beery property line, the guards halted them and ordered them away. The surveyors, who had been sent to obtain topographical data for a contemplated condemnation suit, departed without working.

Beery maintains that the flood ditch would damage his property seriously, while County Engineer Easton holds that a flood similar to that of 1912 would cause more damage.

CLEVELAND, O., June 22.—Anton Lustig, 25, who was to have been married next Saturday, was near death today from injuries received in an automobile collision. Lustig was delivering invitations to his wedding when the accident occurred.

COLUMBUS, O., June 22.—Paul Seifert, 19, of Lancaster, was under arrest here today, charged with stealing a ring and $5 from Irene Polly and $15 from George Tlowita both of whom are tenants in a Parsons Ave. rooming house. The youth was arrested by Detectives Day and Purnell.

WOMAN IS INDICTED ON SECOND MURDER CHARGE; SON HELD

Mrs. Cassler Faces Second Trial For Supreme Crime

VALPARISO, Ind., June 22.—Mrs. Catherine Cassler of Chicago, once sentenced to die on the gallows, was under indictment on a murder charge today.

Both Mrs. Cassler and her son, Edward, 19, were ordered held for trial when true bills were returned against them by the county grand jury investigation for the slaying of Cammeolia Soutar, professional roller skater.

Miss Soutar, the prosecution said, had become a sweetheart of Mrs. Cassler's husband, Trueman, while Mrs. Cassler was in Cook County jail in Chicago.

Mrs. Cassler's husband, who admitted the romance, was detained as a material witness.

Mrs. Cassler calmly received word of her indictment, but was greatly agitated because her son was named with her.

Authorities contended Mrs. Cassler lured the Soutar girl from Chicago to Hebron, Ind., near where she shot and killed her and threw her body into a swamp. A small boy, gathering wild flowers, came across the corpse.

PLANE REPAIRED IN MID-AIR BY DARING PILOT; SAVES FOUR

Flyer Hangs By Feet To Fix Landing Gear Of Ship

HARTFORD, Conn., June 22.—Lieutenant Carl A. Dixon, Hartford aviator, nonchalantly went about making repairs on his five-passenger airplane today while fellow fliers hailed him for one of the most remarkable exhibitions of coolness and skill in aviation annals.

Discovering his landing gear was disabled while flying over Williamantic, Dixon turned over the controls of the ship to a mechanic, cut a hole in the bottom of the fuselage and repaired the landing gear with a rope and a shoe string while hanging by his feet.

Then he brought the plane and its three passengers down to a twenty-five-mile-an-hour landing at Brainhard Field.

For nearly two hours, Dixon hung from the plane, his work hampered by buffeting winds and the discomfort of his position while aviators from Brainard Field here flew around the disabled plane, unable to help. One aviator took up parachutes which he offered to drop to Dixon's plane, but Dixon waved him away.

Dixon took off from Brainard Field for Williamantic with three people yesterday. They were David Weingart, his mechanic; Joseph Blastrun, Northampton, Mass., pilot, and John Anderson, employee of a local flying organization.

As Dixon came swooping down for a landing at the Williamatic Field, observers noticed the right v-strut of the landing gear had become detached from the fuselage and was hanging limply. Had the plane attempted to land, aviators said, the landing gear would have crumpled and the plane probably crashed into the earth with terrific force.

Death or injury to the four fliers would almost certainly have resulted.

Heeding the warning, Dixon gained altitude and looked over the side of his plane. When he saw his plight, he headed for Hartford, told Weingart to take the controls and began to work.

Because of the small space in which he had to work, Dixon was forced to strip to the waist. Then, patiently, he began work on the hanging strut while the passengers prayed for his success.

At last, he drew himself up into the plane with a sigh of relief, took the controls and brought the ship down to a masterful landing that did not jar the crippled landing gear.

NEWARK, O., June 22.—William Brown, 16, son of a Mt. Vernon jeweler, died in City Hospital last night from a fractured skull received late yesterday when the auto in which he was riding with four other persons left the road on a curve eight miles north of here on the Mt. Vernon road. Mrs. Gordon Hansted, also of Mt. Vernon, suffered a fractured skull.

The others injured were: Brown's sister, Margaret, Mrs. Hansted's daughter, Mary and Bert Pharis, who were cut and bruised.

NEW YORK HEARTLESS?

Hard-Boiled Metropolis Melts Under Appeal Of Stricken Youth.

NEW YORK, June 22.—The traditional heartlessness of a great city has collapsed before the appeal of a boy who is dying from a mysterious disease and today 100 men, women and children stood ready to give of their money or even their blood, to keep the lad alive.

George Mosher is fourteen years old. His mother is dead and his father unable to work he lies in the Seaside Hospital on Staten Island, wasted by a disease which physicians have diagnosed as kala-azar, or black fever. Blood is needed urgently to combat the parasite which has been sapping the boy's strength.

The situation had hardly been reported in the newspapers before offers of help began to materialize. Tom Kane, the professional blood-giver who usually gets $50 for a transfusion, offered as much blood as was necessary—for nothing. A Polish laborer, a Jewish merchant, some other boy's mother—all strangers to each other and none of them knowing the Mosher boy—telephoned the hospital with offers to help.

A score of men made trips to the hospital to see if their blood would be suitable for transfusions. Among them was a lawyer, a graduate of Yale and Harvard. School children raised a fund to help pay George's hospital bills. Two prominent men who wished to remain anonymous offered to take over all expenses of the hospital treatment.

DAWES AND GIBSON TO REPRESENT U. S. AT LONDON PARLEY

Diplomatic Amateur And Veteran To Discuss Navies

WASHINGTON, June 22.—An amateur and a veteran in diplomacy have been selected by President Hoover as the team to represent the United States in the forthcoming naval reductions discussions.

Charles G. Dawes and Hugh S. Gibson, both American ambassadors but in most respects unlike, comprise the American team. They will meet in London next week to exchange ideas and prepare for future negotiations. The state department revealed Gibson had been authorized to leave his Brussels post to bring Dawes up to date on the status of armaments question before the League of Nations preparatory commission.

Dawes is the diplomatic amateur. His experience as chairman of the reparations experts committee in 1924 was largely concerned with banking and business. He is no stranger to diplomats, however. As vice-president during the past four years he did the administration's dining out at diplomatic tables.

Gibson has been twenty-one years in the American diplomatic service, beginning as a secretary at Tegucigalpas, Honduras. He is what is known in the foreign service as a career man, whereas Dawes is a political appointee to diplomacy. Of the two, Gibson probably is on more intimate relations with the president.

Mr. Hoover's knowledge of Gibson dates from war days when Gibson was secretary of the legation in Brussels and the president was feeding starving Belgians.

CONEY ISLAND WILL TEST COOPER EDICT

CINCINNATI, O., June 22.—Governor Myers Y. Cooper's anti-race horse and whippet gambling edict, may be tested again before long, it was said today.

The Coney Island Jockey Club it was said, intends to launch an eighteen-day meet as soon as the Latonia Jockey Club meet ends on July 6.

Decision to open the track was announced following a meeting of stockholders who said the "contribution" system of betting probably would be used.

The decision comes in the face of Governor Cooper's request that the West Jefferson dog track and Bainbridge race horse track, close or stop gambling.

CONFESSED SLAYER WILL BE ARRAIGNED ON CHARGE MONDAY

Narcotic Angle Is Probed As Possible New Motive

COLUMBUS, O., June 22.—With his arraignment on a first degree murder charge set for 9 a. m. Monday, Dr. James H. Snook, confessed slayer of Theora Hix, Ohio State University co-ed, was undecided today whether to carry out his plan to plead guilty.

Should the former professor of veterinary medicine plead guilty, and throw himself upon the mercy of the court, the court would reserve the right to impose death or life imprisonment as the penalty. Snook has not been apprised of this.

The professor's attorney, John F. Seidel, still unconvinced that Snook is guilty, said he would not permit his client to plead guilty if "it can be avoided." Seidel insists the case go to trial.

The co-ed's mutilated body was found on the New York Central rifle range here eight days ago. Snook, who occupied a "love nest" with her, was arrested. He confessed Thursday and was indicted yesterday.

The indictment charged "malice aforethought," declaring, in effect, that Snook, married and the father of a child, was rational when he slew the girl.

The bill cites that death was caused by a severed jugular vein, in other words that Snook, after felling his paramour with a ball-pein hammer, calmly took out his pocket knife and as calmly slashed the girl's throat.

In his confession, the bald, middle-aged professor said he cut the co-ed's throat "because he sympathized with her suffering" and "wanted to end it."

The indictment was returned after twenty-eight witnesses paraded before the grand jurors. They told of Snook's family life, of his relations with the medical student, and of tangible events leading up to and after the tragedy.

As justice moved swiftly there still remained the sinister shadow of narcotics, injected into the picture before Snook's confession, when a woman said the instructor had given her drugs.

Federal Narcotic Agent William F. Ford has been assigned to question Snook as to the existence of possible drug traffic in the University district; whether Miss Hix, who had an unexplained bank account, was possibly involved in the sale of drugs.

This angle, although later abandoned, was considered as a possible motive for the murder. Then Snook, in his confession, said the girl tried to "dominate" his life; that he killed her when she objected to his leaving town and threatened to kill his wife and baby.

Snook went through the processes of the Bureau of Identification yesterday and later identified the hammer and knife with which he says he ended the girl's life.

Snook's wife, Helen, reiterated today that she "will go to Snook as soon as she is permitted." She said she wouldn't believe her husband committee "this terrible crime until he, himself, tells me."

SHIELDS WILL HEAD DES MOINES SCHOOL

DES MOINES, Ia., June 22.—Dr. T. T. Shields of Toronto, president of the Baptist Bible Union of North America and head of the board of trustees of Des Moines University, has been chosen president of the school.

Assisting him, as in the past, will be Miss Edith M. Rebman, secretary of the Bible Union and the university's board of trustees and treasurer of the school proper.

The trustees, at a secret meeting here yesterday, placed Dr. Shields and Miss Rebman in full control of the university.

But there was some question as to what control the president and his secretary would have over the rebellious student body which on May 11 tossed eggs at them when Dr. Shields dismissed the old faculty. The students have threatened never to return as long as Dr. Shields and Miss Rebman are in power.

NOAH BEERY BEATS FLOOD CONTROL

HOLLYWOOD, June 22.—Armed guards that Noah Beery stationed on his San Fernando Valley property to prevent county authorities from constructing a flood control channel on the land were standing at ease today.

The movie actor won a preliminary skirmish yesterday when his armed guards "repulsed" an invading group of county surveyors.

As the surveyors neared the Beery property line, the guards halted them and ordered them away. The surveyors, who had been sent to obtain topographical data for a contemplated condemnation suit, departed without working.

Beery maintains that the flood ditch would damage his property seriously, while County Engineer Easton holds that a flood similar to that of 1912 would cause more damage.

PLANE REPAIRED IN MID-AIR BY DARING PILOT; SAVES FOUR

Flyer Hangs By Feet To Fix Landing Gear Of Ship

HARTFORD, Conn., June 22.—Lieutenant Carl A. Dixon, Hartford aviator, nonchalantly went about making repairs on his five-passenger airplane today while fellow fliers hailed him for one of the most remarkable exhibitions of coolness and skill in aviation annals.

Discovering his landing gear was disabled while flying over Williamantic, Dixon turned over the controls of the ship to a mechanic, cut a hole in the bottom of the fuselage and repaired the landing gear with a rope and a shoe string while hanging by his feet.

Then he brought the plane and its three passengers down to a twenty-five-mile-an-hour landing at Brainhard Field.

For nearly two hours, Dixon hung from the plane, his work hampered by buffeting winds and the discomfort of his position while aviators from Brainard Field here flew around the disabled plane, unable to help. One aviator took up parachutes which he offered to drop to Dixon's plane, but Dixon waved him away.

Dixon took off from Brainard Field for Williamantic with three people yesterday. They were David Weingart, his mechanic; Joseph Blastrun, Northampton, Mass., pilot, and John Anderson, employee of a local flying organization.

As Dixon came swooping down for a landing at the Williamatic Field, observers noticed the right v-strut of the landing gear had become detached from the fuselage and was hanging limply. Had the plane attempted to land, aviators said, the landing gear would have crumpled and the plane probably crashed into the earth with terrific force.

Death or injury to the four fliers would almost certainly have resulted.

Heeding the warning, Dixon gained altitude and looked over the side of his plane. When he saw his plight, he headed for Hartford, told Weingart to take the controls and began to work.

Because of the small space in which he had to work, Dixon was forced to strip to the waist. Then, patiently, he began work on the hanging strut while the passengers prayed for his success.

At last, he drew himself up into the plane with a sigh of relief, took the controls and brought the ship down to a masterful landing that did not jar the crippled landing gear.

WOMAN IS INDICTED ON SECOND MURDER CHARGE; SON HELD

Mrs. Cassler Faces Second Trial For Supreme Crime

VALPARISO, Ind., June 22.—Mrs. Catherine Cassler of Chicago, once sentenced to die on the gallows, was under indictment on a murder charge today.

Both Mrs. Cassler and her son, Edward, 19, were ordered held for trial when true bills were returned against them by the county grand jury investigation for the slaying of Cammeolia Soutar, professional roller skater.

Miss Soutar, the prosecution said, had become a sweetheart of Mrs. Cassler's husband, Trueman, while Mrs. Cassler was in Cook County jail in Chicago.

Mrs. Cassler's husband, who admitted the romance, was detained as a material witness.

Mrs. Cassler calmly received word of her indictment, but was greatly agitated because her son was named with her.

Authorities contended Mrs. Cassler lured the Soutar girl from Chicago to Hebron, Ind., near where she shot and killed her and threw her body into a swamp. A small boy, gathering wild flowers, came across the corpse.

NEW YORK HEARTLESS?

Hard-Boiled Metropolis Melts Under Appeal Of Stricken Youth.

NEW YORK, June 22.—The traditional heartlessness of a great city has collapsed before the appeal of a boy who is dying from a mysterious disease and today 100 men, women and children stood ready to give of their money or even their blood, to keep the lad alive.

George Mosher is fourteen years old. His mother is dead and his father unable to work he lies in the Seaside Hospital on Staten Island, wasted by a disease which physicians have diagnosed as kala-azar, or black fever. Blood is needed urgently to combat the parasite which has been sapping the boy's strength.

The situation had hardly been reported in the newspapers before offers of help began to materialize. Tom Kane, the professional blood-giver who usually gets $50 for a transfusion, offered as much blood as was necessary—for nothing. A Polish laborer, a Jewish merchant, some other boy's mother—all strangers to each other and none of them knowing the Mosher boy—telephoned the hospital with offers to help.

A score of men made trips to the hospital to see if their blood would be suitable for transfusions. Among them was a lawyer, a graduate of Yale and Harvard. School children raised a fund to help pay George's hospital bills. Two prominent men who wished to remain anonymous offered to take over all expenses of the hospital treatment.

DAVEY LEE

DAWES AND GIBSON TO REPRESENT U. S. AT LONDON PARLEY

Diplomatic Amateur And Veteran To Discuss Navies

WASHINGTON, June 22.—An amateur and a veteran in diplomacy have been selected by President Hoover as the team to represent the United States in the forthcoming naval reductions discussions.

Charles G. Dawes and Hugh S. Gibson, both American ambassadors but in most respects unlike, comprise the American team. They will meet in London next week to exchange ideas and prepare for future negotiations. The state department revealed Gibson had been authorized to leave his Brussels post to bring Dawes up to date on the status of armaments question before the League of Nations preparatory commission.

Dawes is the diplomatic amateur. His experience as chairman of the reparations experts committee in 1924 was largely concerned with banking and business. He is no stranger to diplomats, however. As vice-president during the past four years he did the administration's dining out at diplomatic tables.

Gibson has been twenty-one years in the American diplomatic service, beginning as a secretary at Tegucigalpas, Honduras. He is what is known in the foreign service as a career man, whereas Dawes is a political appointee to diplomacy. Of the two, Gibson probably is on more intimate relations with the president.

Mr. Hoover's knowledge of Gibson dates from war days when Gibson was secretary of the legation in Brussels and the president was feeding starving Belgians.

CONEY ISLAND WILL TEST COOPER EDICT

CINCINNATI, O., June 22.—Governor Myers Y. Cooper's anti-race horse and whippet gambling edict, may be tested again before long, it was said today.

The Coney Island Jockey Club it was said, intends to launch an eighteen-day meet as soon as the Latonia Jockey Club meet ends on July 6.

Decision to open the track was announced following a meeting of stockholders who said the "contribution" system of betting probably would be used.

The decision comes in the face of Governor Cooper's request that the West Jefferson dog track and Bainbridge race horse track, close or stop gambling.

CONFESSED SLAYER WILL BE ARRAIGNED ON CHARGE MONDAY

Narcotic Angle Is Probed As Possible New Motive

COLUMBUS, O., June 22.—With his arraignment on a first degree murder charge set for 9 a. m. Monday, Dr. James H. Snook, confessed slayer of Theora Hix, Ohio State University co-ed, was undecided today whether to carry out his plan to plead guilty.

Should the former professor of veterinary medicine plead guilty, and throw himself upon the mercy of the court, the court would reserve the right to impose death or life imprisonment as the penalty. Snook has not been apprised of this.

The professor's attorney, John F. Seidel, still unconvinced that Snook is guilty, said he would not permit his client to plead guilty if "it can be avoided." Seidel insists the case go to trial.

The co-ed's mutilated body was found on the New York Central rifle range here eight days ago. Snook, who occupied a "love nest" with her, was arrested. He confessed Thursday and was indicted yesterday.

The indictment charged "malice aforethought," declaring, in effect, that Snook, married and the father of a child, was rational when he slew the girl.

The bill cites that death was caused by a severed jugular vein, in other words that Snook, after felling his paramour with a ball-pein hammer, calmly took out his pocket knife and as calmly slashed the girl's throat.

In his confession, the bald, middle-aged professor said he cut the co-ed's throat "because he sympathized with her suffering" and "wanted to end it."

The indictment was returned after twenty-eight witnesses paraded before the grand jurors. They told of Snook's family life, of his relations with the medical student, and of tangible events leading up to and after the tragedy.

As justice moved swiftly there still remained the sinister shadow of narcotics, injected into the picture before Snook's confession, when a woman said the instructor had given her drugs.

Federal Narcotic Agent William F. Ford has been assigned to question Snook as to the existence of possible drug traffic in the University district; whether Miss Hix, who had an unexplained bank account, was possibly involved in the sale of drugs.

This angle, although later abandoned, was considered as a possible motive for the murder. Then Snook, in his confession, said the girl tried to "dominate" his life; that he killed her when she objected to his leaving town and threatened to kill his wife and baby.

Snook went through the processes of the Bureau of Identification yesterday and later identified the hammer and knife with which he says he ended the girl's life.

Snook's wife, Helen, reiterated today that she "will go to Snook as soon as she is permitted." She said she wouldn't believe her husband committee "this terrible crime until he, himself, tells me."

SHIELDS WILL HEAD DES MOINES SCHOOL

DES MOINES, Ia., June 22.—Dr. T. T. Shields of Toronto, president of the Baptist Bible Union of North America and head of the board of trustees of Des Moines University, has been chosen president of the school.

Assisting him, as in the past, will be Miss Edith M. Rebman, secretary of the Bible Union and the university's board of trustees and treasurer of the school proper.

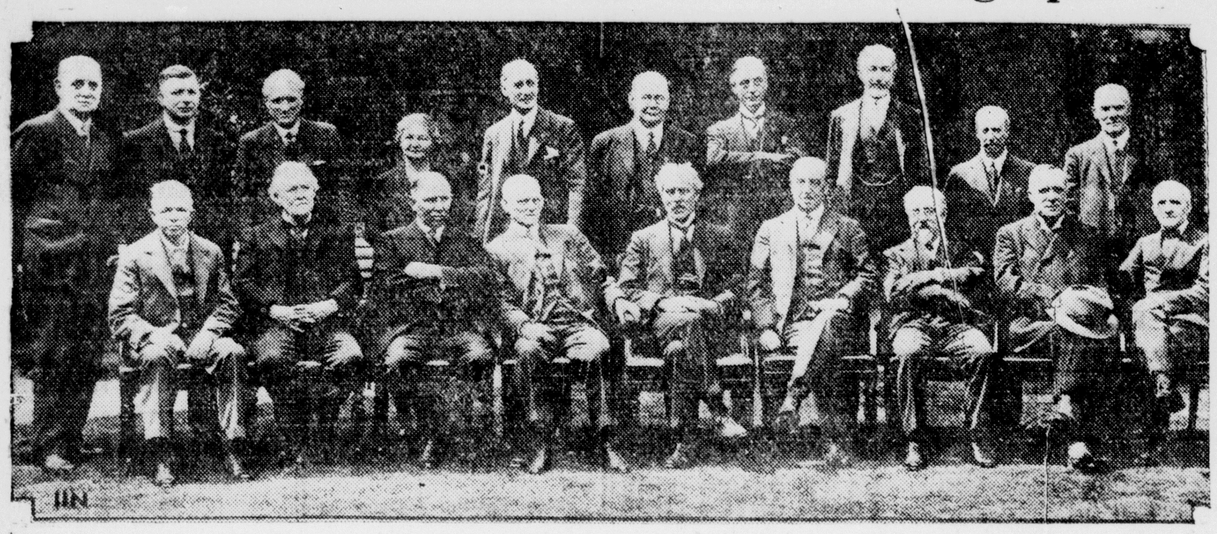

The trustees, at a secret meeting here yesterday, placed Dr. Shields and Miss Rebman in full control of the university.

But there was some question as to what control the president and his secretary would have over the rebellious student body which on May 11 tossed eggs at them when Dr. Shields dismissed the old faculty. The students have threatened never to return as long as Dr. Shields and Miss Rebman are in power.

On next August 22 Mr. Clark will have carried mail over the same route in Xenia exactly thirty-eight years, three months and twenty-three days.

At present he is one of eight city carriers. He was appointed several years before postal employes were placed under civil service and since the civil service law became effective has been in the continuous employ of the post office for thirty-eight years.

He has always carried mail over the same route which is five and one-half miles in length, making one full trip daily in the morning, later covering part of the route and also making a delivery in the business section.

His two-year extension was recommended in a letter addressed to the postmaster general by Charles F. Trotter, acting first assistant postmaster general, who said: "It is believed that it would be advantageous to the public service to retain Mr. Clark for a period of not exceeding two years in accordance with the provisions of section 2 of the act of July 3, 1926 and I so recommend."

His home is at 103 W. Main St.

HOOVER WILL SPEND SUMMER IN CAPITAL

WASHINGTON, June 22.—President Hoover has solved the summer survival problem and plans to remain in the capital during most of the congressional recess in spite of the sweltering weather.

He has no vacation plans, beyond occasional week end trips to his two nearby fishing preserves in Maryland and Virginia. He plans no excursions to fill speaking engagements and under present plans will remain at his desk in the executive offices without interruption, at least until early fall.

Two major policies of the new administration will receive the president's attention during the summer months—establishment of the recently authorized federal farm board, and the advancement of the navy reduction discussions with Great Britain. He is giving personal attention to both.

RESEARCH WORK AT ANTIOCH PROVIDED UNDER FELS FUND

Through the support of the Fels Fund, newly-established by Samuel Fels, of Philadelphia, Pa., which will provide $15,000 a year for the next ten years to be expended under supervision of the college administration, Antioch College is to be made headquarters for research on the question of heriditary and environmental influences.

The research activities will be directed by Dr. L. W. Sontag, college physician, who will be assisted by two associates to be added to the department of health.

Investigation of the origin and formation of habits and of personal limitations of excellencies of physical condition and personality or character is the object of the research project. Upon the productiveness of results of the various fields depends somewhat the exact direction which the inquiry will take.

The plans at present include the following details:

1.—Compilation of pre-natal data concerning children from seventy-five to 100 families of varying social planes, including the physical condition and diet of the mother and family and personal history and social environment.

2.—After birth, periodic observations of the child's growth, mental development, behavior and health, and of parental discipline and family influences.

To help formulate the problem and to lay foundation for the study of these cases as they reach various stages of growth, a preliminary study of the physical problems and habits of older children will be made.

LINEMAN ELECTROCUTED

TOLEDO, O., June 22.—Ned Nagus, 35, lineman for the Toledo Edison Company, was electrocuted here when he came in contact with a high tension wire.

MOTHER OF EIGHT SLAIN BY HUSBAND WHO SHOOTS SELF

GROVE CITY, O., June 22.—Mrs. Eva Wilkins, mother of eight children and about to become the mother of a ninth, was shot and killed by her husband, Fred, a laborer today, as she stood in the doorway of their shack, awaiting the arrival of a doctor.

As Mrs. Wilkins' body sprawled in the doorway, Wilkins, believed deranged by the loss of an eye and approaching loss of vision in the other, went to his bedroom, propped his shotgun against a bed post, and in some way pulled the trigger.

As Mrs. Wilkins was shot down Mrs. Harr Eitel, a neighbor, was searching for a doctor to aid in Mrs. Wilkins' accouchement, which was expected momentarily.

The Wilkins' shack, a ramshackle structure, is six miles south of here on the Three C's highway.

Mrs. Eitel found Mrs. Wilkins' body when she returned from a futile search for the doctor.

Wilkins was found in the bedroom. He was not dead and an ambulance was called. The charge had entered his stomach. He was taken to Columbus.

Neighbors said Wilkins had been of unstable mind for some time. He brooded over the loss of his eye and impending loss of sight in the other, they said.

Neighbors, too, said the Wilkins quarrelled frequently and that Thursday night Mrs. Wilkins locked her husband out of the house.

The World And All

BY CHARLES B. DRISCOLL

THE NEWEST YOUTH

It never occurred to me that a great deal of time has passed since the close of the World war until I was talking with Jesse Lynch Williams recently.

Williams is 58 years old, but his specialty is youth. Not only is he young in spirit himself, but he keeps constantly in touch with youth. He pointed out to me that there is a new new youth. We talked about the new generation a great deal just after the World war. But now there is a new new generation.

The youth you see entering our colleges today is quite a different generation from the youth you saw entering the colleges ten years ago. I didn't realize it. But Williams doesn't miss a thing.

Williams has a new novel, "They Still Fall in Love," published by Scribner's. It deals with this newest tide of American youth. It is a clear and true picture, too.

"The new generation is old now," says Jesse Lynch Williams. Meaning, I suppose, that the girls we started calling flappers in 1918 aren't flappers any more. Dear me! Some of those sweet things are attending regular meetings of the Mothers' club now, and wondering who on earth ever put such silly ideas into the heads of ten-year-old Mary or Adele.

The younger sisters and nieces of the post-war flapper are coming along, possessing the earth and the rear seats now.

Williams writes and talks understandingly of youth. He began writing about youth when he was quite a youngster himself. He wrote the very first book of college short stories that was ever written. He first put the cub reporter into exciting short-story fiction.

He is a charming gentleman, and he knows his youngsters. He has grown and married children of his own, to be sure, but he keeps his fingers still upon the pulse of youth. He knows how to interpret the beating of the adolescent heart.

CHILDREN TO ENTER SCHOOL NEXT FALL WILL BE EXAMINED

Children of Bath, Spring Valley and Miami Twps., who will enter school next fall for the first time, will have an opportunity to be examined by local doctors and Dr. R. H. Grube, county health commissioner. The Greene County general health district has arranged for an early start in the task of seeing that the incoming crop of school children is as free from defects as possible. The P.-T. A. is co-operating with Dr. Grube in arranging for the examination of preschool children.

A record containing a statement of the child's physical condition will be sent the parents and the family physician. Nurses from the state department of health will be present to assist with the conference and to talk with the parents regarding diet, exercise and general hygiene.

Sick children will not be admitted, as the conference is not a clinic. No treatment or prescriptions will be given. Where there is need for treatment the case will be referred to the family physician.

The conference at Osborn will be held Tuesday and Wednesday, June 25 and 26, Spring Valley, June 27 and Yellow Springs, June 28. These conferences are to be held at the high school building in each community.

SUMMER'S ADVENT BREAKS HEAT WAVE

Predicted thundershowers failed to materialize Friday, which was the longest day of the year and marked a slight break in the smeltering temperatures which Xenia has felt.

Marking the advent of summer, the longest day of the year is known technically as the summer solstice.

Exactly at 5 p. m. was the moment when at the south pole the middle of the six-months night struck while at the same instant the noon bell sounded at the north pole to mark the middle of the six-months day period, or something like that.

While in the northern hemisphere the summer solstice marks the day with the longest period of sunshine hours, in the southern hemisphere it is the shortest day.

EXCAVATION WORK NEARLY COMPLETED

Excavation work preparatory to the erection of a modern, one-story business building on the site of the old Day property at 19 E. Second St., recently acquired by P. H. Flynn, N. Detroit St., is expected to be completed by next Wednesday.

Completion of the brick building is planned for next September 15 and it will be occupied by the Cussins and Fearn Co., Columbus, which operates a chain of stores in Ohio, handling general merchandise.

The two-story building which has occupied the site, has been razed and it will be replaced by a structure which will have an attractive front and in addition, a large basement.

CAN NOT COMPLETE APPOINTMENT NOW

Authority to make the formal appointment of Orlando Sprigg as assistant postmaster of the Xenia Post Office will not be given by the postal department until next August, Postmaster C. S. Frazer said Saturday.

Sprigg, mailing clerk, connected with the postoffice for the last eighteen years, was appointed acting assistant postmaster May 15, upon the retirement of Walter E. Wike. The formal appointment cannot be made until a probationary period of three months expires. Postmaster Frazer has been advised.

CALL OF CLARA IS MUSIC TO FESS

FROM Washington D. C. comes the information that Senator Simeon D. Fess has heard the call of Clara, his colored cook and housekeeper, and soon will be leaving for his home in Yellow Springs.

SIMEON FESS

Clara, in the opinion of the senator, is an artist in the matter of culinary things and Senator Fess, who has lived all winter in a Washington hotel, is longing to feast again on her hot corn bread, buttered beets, cream pies and other delectable concoctions.

Besides that, Clara has written him that the roses are fast disappearing and the weeds even faster appearing in his garden. He is aching to don his old clothes and disreputable straw hat, seize his hoe and get busy.

For the senior Ohio senator, no pleasure in Washington Square compares with Clara's cookery and tending his garden. He is said to be keen to get back. Besides his arduous duties as majority whip he has been forced to submit to a dental operation and to withstand an attack of tonsilitis. Now it is said he wants to take a home cure.

ATTEMPT TO BREAK WILL IS FAILURE

COLUMBUS, O., June 22.—Mrs. Ruth M. Bender of Zanesville, has appealed to the state supreme court from a decision of the lower courts of Muskingum County refusing to break the will of William Bateman, Zanesville millionaire. Mrs. Bender and her brother, Frederick W. Bateman, were children of William Bateman by a first marriage. Each was bequeathed $5,000.

The lower courts held that the fact that Mrs. Bender accepted her bequest denied her the right to contest the will. The elder Bateman's estate was valued at $1,750,000. Mrs. Bender's original petition charged that Bateman's second wife "used undue influence in having her husband disinherit his children."

ARCHAEOLOGICAL SOCIETY MAY START

Formation of what would be known as the Greene County Archaeological Society may be an outgrowth of the display of a large collection of Indian relics, being exhibited at the salesroom of Purdom and McFarland, Oakland and Pontiac dealers, at Main and Whiteman Sts., by Charles F. Brown, Toledo archaeologist.

In many cities where the exhibition has been held movements have been launched to form an archaeological society and obtain a museum for the preservation of relics and historical documents.

PREDICTS PEACE

A peaceful and constructive summer for Europe was prophesied by Prof. Rudolph Broda, of Antioch College, in his last lecture for the year on international events of importance, given at the college Friday. His topic was "The New Outlook for Naval Disarmament."

BARNYARD COURT DECIDES ON GOOSE

LACKAWANA, N. Y., June 22.—Two women appeared in court here to claim possession of a goose, and it was only by a unique decision that the claim was properly settled.

The goose was taken first to one home and allowed to walk in the yard. Here the goose seemed at a loss. Shortly after it was carried to the second home and left alone. It stayed in a coop in the yard and honked away merrily. The court decided to award the fowl to the second woman.

HARRY L. CLARK, oldest city mail carrier in point of service at the Xenia Post Office, who is rounding out thirty-eight years of continuous service, has been granted a two-year extension, dating from August 22 when he will become 65 years old and eligible for retirement on pension.

Trotter, acting first assistant postmaster general, who said: "It is believed that it would be advantageous to the public service to retain Mr. Clark for a period of not exceeding two years in accordance with the provisions of section 2 of the act of July 3, 1926 and I so recommend."

HOOVER WILL SPEND SUMMER IN CAPITAL

WASHINGTON, June 22.—President Hoover has solved the summer survival problem and plans to remain in the capital during most of the congressional recess in spite of the sweltering weather.

He has no vacation plans, beyond occasional week end trips to his two nearby fishing preserves in Maryland and Virginia. He plans no excursions to fill speaking engagements and under present plans will remain at his desk in the executive offices without interruption, at least until early fall.

Two major policies of the new administration will receive the president's attention during the summer months—establishment of the recently authorized federal farm board, and the advancement of the navy reduction discussions with Great Britain. He is giving personal attention to both.

RESEARCH WORK AT ANTIOCH PROVIDED UNDER FELS FUND

Through the support of the Fels Fund, newly-established by Samuel Fels, of Philadelphia, Pa., which will provide $15,000 a year for the next ten years to be expended under supervision of the college administration, Antioch College is to be made headquarters for research on the question of heriditary and environmental influences.

The research activities will be directed by Dr. L. W. Sontag, college physician, who will be assisted by two associates to be added to the department of health.

Investigation of the origin and formation of habits and of personal limitations of excellencies of physical condition and personality or character is the object of the research project. Upon the productiveness of results of the various fields depends somewhat the exact direction which the inquiry will take.

The plans at present include the following details:

1.—Compilation of pre-natal data concerning children from seventy-five to 100 families of varying social planes, including the physical condition and diet of the mother and family and personal history and social environment.

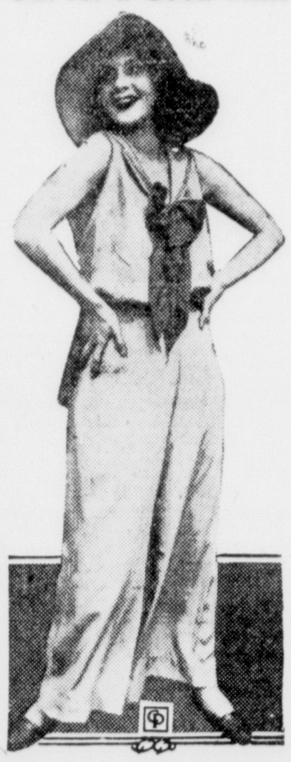

2.—After birth, periodic observations of the child's growth, mental development, behavior and health, and of parental discipline and family influences.

To help formulate the problem and to lay foundation for the study of these cases as they reach various stages of growth, a preliminary study of the physical problems and habits of older children will be made.

MOTHER OF EIGHT SLAIN BY HUSBAND WHO SHOOTS SELF

GROVE CITY, O., June 22.—Mrs. Eva Wilkins, mother of eight children and about to become the mother of a ninth, was shot and killed by her husband, Fred, a laborer today, as she stood in the doorway of their shack, awaiting the arrival of a doctor.

As Mrs. Wilkins' body sprawled in the doorway, Wilkins, believed deranged by the loss of an eye and approaching loss of vision in the other, went to his bedroom, propped his shotgun against a bed post, and in some way pulled the trigger.

As Mrs. Wilkins was shot down Mrs. Harr Eitel, a neighbor, was searching for a doctor to aid in Mrs. Wilkins' accouchement, which was expected momentarily.

The Wilkins' shack, a ramshackle structure, is six miles south of here on the Three C's highway.

Mrs. Eitel found Mrs. Wilkins' body when she returned from a futile search for the doctor.

Wilkins was found in the bedroom. He was not dead and an ambulance was called. The charge had entered his stomach. He was taken to Columbus.

Neighbors said Wilkins had been of unstable mind for some time. He brooded over the loss of his eye and impending loss of sight in the other, they said.

Neighbors, too, said the Wilkins quarrelled frequently and that Thursday night Mrs. Wilkins locked her husband out of the house.

Williams is 58 years old, but his specialty is youth. Not only is he young in spirit himself, but he keeps constantly in touch with youth. He pointed out to me that there is a new new youth. We talked about the new generation a great deal just after the World war. But now there is a new new generation.

The youth you see entering our colleges today is quite a different generation from the youth you saw entering the colleges ten years ago. I didn't realize it. But Williams doesn't miss a thing.

• • •

Williams has a new novel, "They Still Fall in Love," published by Scribner's. It deals with this newest tide of American youth. It is a clear and true picture, too.

"The new generation is old now," says Jesse Lynch Williams. Meaning, I suppose, that the girls we started calling flappers in 1918 aren't flappers any more. Dear me! Some of those sweet things are attending regular meetings of the Mothers' club now, and wondering who on earth ever put such silly ideas into the heads of ten-year-old Mary or Adele.

The younger sisters and nieces of the post-war flapper are coming along, possessing the earth and the rear seats now.

Williams writes and talks understandingly of youth. He began writing about youth when he was quite a youngster himself. He wrote the very first book of college short stories that was ever written. He first put the cub reporter into exciting short-story fiction.

He is a charming gentleman, and he knows his youngsters. He has grown and married children of his own, to be sure, but he keeps his fingers still upon the pulse of youth. He knows how to interpret the beating of the adolescent heart.

CHILDREN TO ENTER SCHOOL NEXT FALL WILL BE EXAMINED

Children of Bath, Spring Valley and Miami Twps., who will enter school next fall for the first time, will have an opportunity to be examined by local doctors and Dr. R. H. Grube, county health commissioner. The Greene County general health district has arranged for an early start in the task of seeing that the incoming crop of school children is as free from defects as possible. The P.-T. A. is co-operating with Dr. Grube in arranging for the examination of preschool children.

A record containing a statement of the child's physical condition will be sent the parents and the family physician. Nurses from the state department of health will be present to assist with the conference and to talk with the parents regarding diet, exercise and general hygiene.

Sick children will not be admitted, as the conference is not a clinic. No treatment or prescriptions will be given. Where there is need for treatment the case will be referred to the family physician.

The conference at Osborn will be held Tuesday and Wednesday, June 25 and 26, Spring Valley, June 27 and Yellow Springs, June 28. These conferences are to be held at the high school building in each community.

SUMMER'S ADVENT BREAKS HEAT WAVE

Predicted thundershowers failed to materialize Friday, which was the longest day of the year and marked a slight break in the smeltering temperatures which Xenia has felt.

Marking the advent of summer, the longest day of the year is known technically as the summer solstice.

Exactly at 5 p. m. was the moment when at the south pole the middle of the six-months night struck while at the same instant the noon bell sounded at the north pole to mark the middle of the six-months day period, or something like that.

While in the northern hemisphere the summer solstice marks the day with the longest period of sunshine hours, in the southern hemisphere it is the shortest day.

EXCAVATION WORK NEARLY COMPLETED

Excavation work preparatory to the erection of a modern, one-story business building on the site of the old Day property at 19 E. Second St., recently acquired by P. H. Flynn, N. Detroit St., is expected to be completed by next Wednesday.

Completion of the brick building is planned for next September 15 and it will be occupied by the Cussins and Fearn Co., Columbus, which operates a chain of stores in Ohio, handling general merchandise.

The two-story building which has occupied the site, has been razed and it will be replaced by a structure which will have an attractive front and in addition, a large basement.

CAN NOT COMPLETE APPOINTMENT NOW

Authority to make the formal appointment of Orlando Sprigg as assistant postmaster of the Xenia Post Office will not be given by the postal department until next August, Postmaster C. S. Frazer said Saturday.

Sprigg, mailing clerk, connected with the postoffice for the last eighteen years, was appointed acting assistant postmaster May 15, upon the retirement of Walter E. Wike. The formal appointment cannot be made until a probationary period of three months expires. Postmaster Frazer has been advised.

CALL OF CLARA IS MUSIC TO FESS

FROM Washington D. C. comes the information that Senator Simeon D. Fess has heard the call of Clara, his colored cook and housekeeper, and soon will be leaving for his home in Yellow Springs.

SIMEON FESS

Clara, in the opinion of the senator, is an artist in the matter of culinary things and Senator Fess, who has lived all winter in a Washington hotel, is longing to feast again on her hot corn bread, buttered beets, cream pies and other delectable concoctions.

Besides that, Clara has written him that the roses are fast disappearing and the weeds even faster appearing in his garden. He is aching to don his old clothes and disreputable straw hat, seize his hoe and get busy.

For the senior Ohio senator, no pleasure in Washington Square compares with Clara's cookery and tending his garden. He is said to be keen to get back. Besides his arduous duties as majority whip he has been forced to submit to a dental operation and to withstand an attack of tonsilitis. Now it is said he wants to take a home cure.

ATTEMPT TO BREAK WILL IS FAILURE

COLUMBUS, O., June 22.—Mrs. Ruth M. Bender of Zanesville, has appealed to the state supreme court from a decision of the lower courts of Muskingum County refusing to break the will of William Bateman, Zanesville millionaire. Mrs. Bender and her brother, Frederick W. Bateman, were children of William Bateman by a first marriage. Each was bequeathed $5,000.

The lower courts held that the fact that Mrs. Bender accepted her bequest denied her the right to contest the will. The elder Bateman's estate was valued at $1,750,000. Mrs. Bender's original petition charged that Bateman's second wife "used undue influence in having her husband disinherit his children."

ARCHAEOLOGICAL SOCIETY MAY START

Formation of what would be known as the Greene County Archaeological Society may be an outgrowth of the display of a large collection of Indian relics, being exhibited at the salesroom of Purdom and McFarland, Oakland and Pontiac dealers, at Main and Whiteman Sts., by Charles F. Brown, Toledo archaeologist.

In many cities where the exhibition has been held movements have been launched to form an archaeological society and obtain a museum for the preservation of relics and historical documents.

A peaceful and constructive summer for Europe was prophesied by Prof. Rudolph Broda, of Antioch College, in his last lecture for the year on international events of importance, given at the college Friday. His topic was "The New Outlook for Naval Disarmament."

BARNYARD COURT DECIDES ON GOOSE

LACKAWANA, N. Y., June 22.—Two women appeared in court here to claim possession of a goose, and it was only by a unique decision that the claim was properly settled.

The goose was taken first to one home and allowed to walk in the yard. Here the goose seemed at a loss. Shortly after it was carried to the second home and left alone. It stayed in a coop in the yard and honked away merrily. The court decided to award the fowl to the second woman.

BIBLE THOUGHT FOR TODAY

THE GREAT TEACHER—And seeing the multitudes, Jesus went up into a mountain: and when he was set, his disciples came unto him: And he opened his mouth, and taught them:—Matthew 5:1, 2.

EXPECTING MUCH OF DAWES

The reception that Ambassador Dawes is receiving in Great Britain is gratifying. The newspapers are giving him much attention. Their majesties are gracious, as Americans have always found them. The prime minister, with whom General Dawes will come into closer contact, is much cordial. This was not unexpected. Great Britain seems to have been awaiting Ambassador Dawes' coming with an impatience born of the hope that he can do much to lessen the tension that has developed between it and his own country.

Anglo-American history unquestionably will be made during his official residence at the court of St. James. There is abundant material to work with. The paths of the United States and Great Britain cross at many points. Ambassador Houghton once pointed out that the differences between the two countries are as natural and as inevitable as squabbles among our own states. They need not be dangerous to peace. The controversy now attracting most attention is over naval strength. That even is amendable to common sense. The Geneva parley failed because it never rose above a dispute between experts over technical details. Statesmanship must step in and define the objective to be sought. The task of the naval experts is then to figure out how it may best be attained.

A great deal is expected of the happy coincidence of Mr. Hoover's administration with the return of Mr. MacDonald to office in Great Britain. They share a passion for peace and good will founded on an intelligent apprecation of the social and economic value of harmony. They are likely to seek it with a minimum of circumlocution. As a liaison officer between two such men, General Dawes has an assignment in which his temperament and training can be made to serve the cause in which they are enlisted.

COST OF MORAL BANKRUPTCY

The net cost of the federal government of nine years of prohibition enforcement is $213,178,485, as Commissioner Doran reckons it. A wet estimate of the annual cost of prohibition enforcement to the nation is $936,000,000. Anyone else is welcome to his own guess. What is less a matter of figure juggling than the cost of enforcement is the cost of non-enforcement. This country is rich enough to finance the enforcement of all its laws. The question which sooner or later it must answer is how long it can afford to foot the bill for non-enforcement of those laws, with its increasingly menacing items of more crime and less respect for authority. A nation morally bankrupt is worse off than one with an empty treasury.

The more Al Smith watches and considers, the more resigned he must be to the outcome of the last general election.

BO-BROADWAY

By JOSEPH VAN RAALTE

NEW YORK—The Three White Sisters came from a small midwest town four years ago with a neat little act.

They thought it was good. So did Fred Stone. He put them in his 1926 show and kept them there for the 1927 season. In all likelihood they'd be with him yet; but the following year one of the White Sisters was married to Joe Cisto (it's Joe, not Joseph), millionaire Wall Street broker.

Then there were only Two White Sisters.

The Two White Sisters went into vaudeville and in the latter part of 1928 a White Sister was married to Sydney Kent, millionaire general manager of Paramount Picture Corporation.

Then there was only One White Sister.

The One White Sister carried on her lonesome stage career until a few days ago, when she was married to Robert Kane, millionaire motion picture producer, and at present general manager of Pathe Picture Corporation.

So three Hum Town gals made good, while back in the Old Place all Maw an' Paw have to do is set back an' boast about their three millionaire sons-in-law.

Following is an antiquated salary list of Weber and Fields' Music Hall, when that inimitable Temple of Burlesque and Bacchus was in its heydey, thirty years ago:

Lillian Russell, $1,250.
De Wolf Hopper, $1,000.
Joe Webber, $200.
Lew Fields, $200.
Fay Templeton, $400.
Pete Daly, $298.
David Warfield, $250.
Ross & Fenton, $250.
Julian Mitchell (stage manager), $200.
John T. Kelly, $187.50.
Bessie Clayton, $150.
George Ali (animal impersonator), $75.
Bonnie Maginn (leading chorus girl), $50.
Moyer Sisters, $40.
Mabel Barrison, $35.
Frankie Bailey (she of the legs), $25.
Twenty-four chorus girls, a total of $480.
John Stromberg (composer), $150.

One vaudeville headliner today receives more money than the cost of entire show.

Slumming parties to the "Last Coast of Bohemia" in Hoboken are dead.

Midnight parties on outgoing transatlantic steamships are fast disappearing.

Broadway's night clubs are in the doldrums.

The steamship parties were overdone by hordes of revelers who swarmed over the vessels, violating even the privacy of the passengers and on occasions sleeping off excessive libations in the berths of open staterooms.

Hoboken is dead because Chris. Morley closed The Black Crook, not before George Jean Nathan wised up the Park Avenue slummers that the beer they were supposed to enjoy in nearby German gardens was no more orthodox than the price.

Night clubs always fade in hot weather, so the town's gone Rip Van Winkle.

A negro boy in the Candler Building entered the office of Gene Leonard, who does the talking for General Talking Pictures, seeking permission to use the mimeograph machine. Gene, who is a good hearted scout offered to run off the copy. The lad handed him a much edited screed wherein members of an Ebony and Ivory lodge were notified of funeral services for a departed brother to be held 'twelve days from date."

"Isn't twelve days quite a long time to keep a defunct brother?" queried Gene.

"Nussah, Misto Gene, yo' got it wrong. De brudder didn't jes' die. He croaked las' April, but we didn't git our uniforms till yistiddy!"

THE WAY of the WORLD

WHAT GOVERNMENT MIGHT DO

A resolution recently introduced in the U. S. senate calls for the appointment of a committee to make an investigation looking toward the cure of cancer. The public health service and the National Academy of Sciences would be directed to co-operate. This is a far more sensible and constructive resolution than most of those which are introduced for the purpose of bringing about investigations. For government to recognize the curse of cancer and to prepare to co-operate with the scientific forces which are trying to better the condition of mankind is for government to be constructive and to set itself seriously at great tasks.

NEVER TO FORGET

News dispatches tell us that former service men in one military home have filed suits for a half million dollars against the government, seeking compensation for injuries received during the World war. The details of these suits have not been widely published, but the thought of able-bodied men and women who look back to the victory of the war and who contemplate the broken bodies of thousands of young men deprived by that war from the normal activities of a happy life, is to hope that the men win their suits. We who are left can not do too much for those who gave so freely in a noble sacrifice.

MOVING UP THE PATH

When we read that representatives of 5,500 Congregational churches have voted unanimously to unite with the general convention of the Christian church we realize that civilized men and women have moved another step up the long path of history. And it is up the path and not down. The movement of men for whole generations may seem uncertain, trivial and purposeless, but over the long run of years it is a movement upward.

As far as possible men should unite in their attitude toward the Creative Power of the universe and toward the establishment of their ideals.

LEGISLATION DECLARED INADEQUATE TO SOLVE FARM PROBLEM

By JOHN KETCHAM
Congressman From Michigan

(John Clark Ketcham was born at Toledo, O., Jan. 1, 1873. He was graduated from high school at Hastings, Mich. He taught in high school from 1892 to 1899. From 1899 to 1907 he was county commissioner of schools, Barry county, Mich. He was postmaster of Hastings from 1907 to 1913 and master of Michigan State Grange from 1912 to 1920. He was elected to congress in 1921 from the fourth Michigan district and is now serving his fourth term. He is a Republican).

Legislation can never be a cure-all for the ills of agriculture.

All classes of our people understand that lasting progress and prosperity cannot come to the nation unless all groups share in it. Without argument it will be admitted that since the World war agriculture has not come back to economic equality with the rest of our people either actually or relatively. Farm people constitute 25 per cent of our national wealth, but their annual income is but 1 per cent of the total.

Farmers produce for market annually $12,500,000,000 worth of food and raw materials. Their purchasing power exceeds 30 per cent of the total of the nation. Depression in agriculture, therefore, immediately registers adversely in commerce and industry—hence the general interest in the farmers' economic welfare.

The universal demand for farm legislation has theretofore developed quite naturally. We Americans have great confidence that legislation will solve our problems. It must be remembered, however, that federal legislation can meet but a few of the difficult farm problems. Farm taxation is mostly a state and local matter. Standards of living are not subject to legislation. Organization of farmers is far short of that of other groups. Legislation may encourage it but cannot compel it.

In short, the personal element has always been the largest factor of success in agriculture as in everything else. All the legislation which the wisest minds can frame, added to ideal farm conditions, will not bring success to a farmer who has not the elements of success within himself.

On the other hand it is equally futile to say that federal legislation can do nothing in the way of relief. Through the power of organization, other groups have secured legislation which has proven of economic advantage. No one will dispute the fact that labor legislation in the last 10 or 15 years has been instrumental in lifting the scale of wages two and one-half times what it was in pre-war days. Similarly transportation rates have increased. Federal legislation has made these advantages possible for particular groups, and it is but natural that agriculture should make its appeal, and congress is now attempting to answer it.

To stumble twice against the same stone is a proverbial disgrace.—Cicero.

THE SPORT OF 'KINGS'

HOW TO ACHIEVE BEAUTY

By MME. HELENA RUBINSTEIN

How to be beautiful though traveling is a problem that faces every woman at some time, and usually, in the summer. Summer week-end trips, excursions to the mountains and seashore, journeys by train, by boat, or even, now, by airplane, take up a goodly share of many vacation days.

Of course you must keep freshly groomed and dainty during all these days of travel, in spite of sun and dust and heat. And you can, very easily, although it may seem difficult, at first, pack the various toilet articles and beauty preparations to which you have grown accustomed.

One idea should dominate your beauty travel kit—the idea of simplicity. You must reduce to the lowest terms the number of items you will take, being very sure, nevertheless, to include all those that are necessary.

The following list states the essentials for any summer journey. For the short trip you may use small sizes of jars and bottles of these preparations, if your packing space is limited. For a longer vacation journey it is wisest to go well stocked with generous sizes, for often the stores at mountain or seashore resorts carry incomplete or deficient lines.

A water softener, in bath salts or crystal form; a cleansing cream, bath soap, deodorant, talcum powder, eye wash, clearing or bleaching cream, skin-toning lotion, face powder, rouge, lipstick, eye make-up.

The water softener comes first because changes of water can be so unpleasant to your skin. If you like you can make one for yourself, using 12 ounces of sodium bicarbonate to 2 ounces of borax. This being in powder form packs easily, and a few spoonsful added to your water for bathing or washing will soften it pleasantly.

For your cleansing cream you will want either a light cleansing cream and massage cream, if your skin is dry, or a pasteurized cream. The latter can serve two uses since it makes an excellent preventive of lines and wrinkles when patted in around your eyes before going out of doors.

Your skin-toning lotion also serves a double purpose, since it acts as a skin tonic, firming the skin against possible lines and creepiness, and at the same time forming a powder base. It may also be used as a quick cleanser and freshener when your face feels warm and dusty.

A cream rouge is the best solution of your rouge problem, for you can use it as lipstick, too. And since it is waterproof you can wear it on all occasions, knowing that salt water and perspiration will not easily affect your color.

If you plan to be out of doors much of the time during your vacation, you should include also a sunproof lotion or cream to guard your complexion against the burning and tanning effects of the sun. Otherwise the list I have given you should be enough.

There are pieces of beauty luggage which you can buy all fitted with the necessary preparations, and you will find any one of them a traveling convenience since they utilize every bit of space in the most efficient way, and, too, prevent any danger of leakage. You can slip one of them—they come in either bag or box form—all fitted into your suit case or trunk, or you can carry it as an underarm purse and so have your beauty aid at hand whenever you need them.

BEHIND THE SCENES IN WASHINGTON

By CHARLES P. STEWART

WASHINGTON. — Survivors of the Tom L. Johnson political school are as scarce today — well, perhaps not as scarce as live dodos, but as scarce as okapi, anyway.

If the Smithsonian regents realized that a fine sample of this almost extinct species actually is to be found in congress, undoubtedly they would clap him into the national museum—or turn him over to Dr. Ales Hrdlicka, the famous anthropologist, to study as a rare specimen.

Yet it's a fact — Representative Robert Crosser of Ohio — Cleveland, where Tom Johnson dwelt for years — and raised heck with the vested interests —though Tom L. was a steel magnate, himself, before he turned radical—as radical, by gosh! as Thomas Jefferson —Bob Crosser is a Tom Johnson Democrat, as sure as congress meets on Capitol Hill.

Tom Johnson's statue — Tom L. has been dead this decade or more, but his statue still occupies a corner in the central square in Cleveland—but I imagine it will be necessary to identify him to most of the present generation, in order to make it clear what a queer bird a congressman must be who believes in the Tom Johnsonian political and economic philosophy now.

Tom L. Johnson, then, was an apostle of the "rights of man."

He was a Democrat (also a democrat, with a little "d") 24 carats fine — as compared with 18 and 12 carat alloys, and even the synthetic article — which pass muster in a large proportion of cases these times.

Being what he was, Tom naturally was an unqualified free trader —no Democratic protectionist or tariff-for-revenue-only-ite.

Having had, as a steel magnate, considerable tariff experience, the things he said on the subject during a term he served in congress, created no end of a scandal in Washington — but that was a long while ago.

Later, as mayor of Cleveland, he fought for public ownership of big utilities. He built a municipal street car line, indeed, and did his best to jam 3-cent fares down the private system's throat, though I've forgotten whether he succeeded or not.

More "ultra" yet, he was a convert to Henry George-ism — the single tax on land values—long since as dead a doctrine in this country as a doornail—except in Pittsburgh.

Representative Crosser was of Tom Johnson's following in his youth, and there are traces of this training in his conversation even today.

Perhaps he is not as vehement a free trader as Johnson was.

"I can see," he admits, "that an infant industry may need a certain amount of help to put it on its feet —to the advantage of all concerned."

(The way I recall it, Tom Johnson once said substantially the same thing; adding, however, that "when the infant threatens to get up and kick your head off if you stop rocking the cradle," he considered it mature enough to take care of itself.)

"But, supposing that an industry does need assistance," continues Crosser, "it seems to me it would be much better to call it out-and-cut subsidy, instead of disguising it as a tariff.

"People who are taxed to develop some enterprise while it is young and struggling, are pretty certain to complain vociferously if the tax is continued long after it is obvious that it is paying its own way —and a huge profit besides.

"Under our protective tariff system the public does not find this out, and is mulcted indefinitely, for the benefit of folk who do not deserve help a small fraction as much as the rest of us do."

"As for the single tax," observed the congressman, "it is true that the idea does seem dead here, outside the city of Pittsburgh, which is making very satisfactory progress toward its realization.

"Yet we must bear in mind that it is gaining ground rapidly in some other parts of the world.

"As its advantages begin to become more and more evident abroad, fresh shoots from the old roots are certain to spring up again throughout the United States."

Watercress Sandwiches—Ground watercress, parsley and some of the winter vegetables, and also grated orange rind, may be used in butter fillings for sandwiches. Wash watercress and drain it thoroughly. Then, using the nut knife of the food grinder, grind up enough watercress to fill a cup. Save a few of the best sprigs of cress for decorating the sandwiches or the plate on which they are served. Blend this with about half a cup of well-creamed butter until it makes a smooth spreading mixture and season with about a fourth teaspoon of salt. Only one liberal spreading, on the under part of each sandwich, is necessary to distribute the butter filling, so the sandwiches are very quickly made.

Parsley Butter Filling — Parsley butter is made like watercress, with the addition of two tablespoons of lemon juice to each cup of ground parsley and each half cup of creamed butter. Carrots, raw cabbage and celery may all be ground up, seasoned and mixed with butter for fillings in about the same proportion — two parts of the vegetables to one of butter.

Orange aSndwiches — Open-face orange sandwiches are made by spreading a mixture of equal parts of grated orange rind and butter on thin sandwich bread, cut in fancy shapes. No cover slices are used. When these butter mixtures are stored in a cold place, they must, of course, be worked again to a creamy consistency before spreading.

POISON IVY: A TRAGEDY

Picnic in the woods:

Young lovers a little detached from the others. "Oh! The pretty leaves! I just love leaves! Let's pick a bouquet of them," enthuses the beautiful girl. "Yes, let's. They are beautiful. Just like you, my sweet!" responds her gallant lover. Evening of the same day.

Bedroom of beautiful girl. Girl trying to go to sleep. Smarting, burning, itching, paining. Wonders how she could have sunburned enough to cause such intense discomfort.

Bedroom of gallant lover. G. L. comfortably going to sleep, happily murmuring: "How beautiful she is! How beautiful she is."

Next Day:

Bedroom of beautiful girl. A figure on the bed shaped like a human being, but scarcely recognizable as such. Face so swollen that eyes are fiery red surface. Hands, arms and legs the same. Evidence of considerable fever and great distress. Doctor at bedside. Diagnosis: Poison Ivy. B. G. begs news of her lover. Is he dying, too?

Later:

Lover, worried, but physically unscratched, entering the room of his lady with her mother. "My God," he murmurs, "can it be my Sweet? And how beautiful she was! How beautiful she was!

I have given this little tragedy, taken from real life before (and no doubt you know of many similar incidents), to bring out several facts of ivy poisoning: the character of the inflammation, the fever and illness, and the individual susceptibility. What the individual susceptibility depends upon, no one knows, so far as I can find out. Probably our old enemy, lowered resistance, and, possibly, inherited tendencies.

Dermatitis Veneata (Part 1)

Have you an inflammation of the skin which looks like poison ivy, and still you are confident that you have not come in contact with it? I'll give you a little lesson on Dermatitis Veneata, and it may solve your whole problem.

Under the title Dermatitis Venenata are included all of the inflammatory conditions of the skin due to contact with caustics, drugs, plants and many other substances. The most frequently causes are chemicals and certain hair tonics and dyes. Many things are more or less irritating to all skins, but in some the inflammation may be so marked and extensive that we have to think they have a peculiar susceptibility to the irritant, known as an idiosyncrasy.

Workers who have to handle sugars, flours, polishing materials, pastes, tobacco and similar objects, may be subject to dermatitis venenata, also surgeons and nurses whose hands are more or less constantly in contact with strong antiseptic solutions for sterilizing purposes.

So if you have an inflammation of the skin, see if you cannot ferret out some irritant with which you come in contact.

During the season, the rhus plants bring the largest number of cases of D. V. to the clinics. These plants are the rhus toxico-dendron (poison ivy), a climbing plant; rhus poison oak, a small tree or shrub, and poison sumac. When Mah Jongg firsst come into high favor, there were several cases of D. V. in susceptibles from the lacquer on the boxes which contained the sets, as these are made of a varnish from the resin of the rhus plants of Japan and China.

Among other plants that may cause eruptions are the nettle, primrose, smartweed, balm of Gilead, and even tomato plants.

Tomorrow: Dermatitis Venenata (Part 2).

LIVING AND LOVING

By MRS. VIRGINIA LEE

I have discoursed so often in this column about friendliness begetting friendliness, that it seems to me that it has become a sort of refrain. But every day I get letters wailing "I have no friends. How can I make them?"

You certainly can't make friends by walking haughtily past people you know without speaking. And you won't win people to you if you think they are deceitful and never trust them.

"People think I am conceited and stuck-up," one of my correspondents writes. Well, dear, wouldn't you think people were "conceited and stuck-up" if they walked past you with their noses in the air, and never vouchsafed a word? I would, and I'm a very friendly soul.

Get this into your head, little girl. You are not the only lonely soul in the world. There are many, and all are looking for some one who is friendly, sympathetic and understanding. When they find that one they are going to love them dearly. You should be interested, not so much in getting a friend for yourself, but in being a friend to someone that may need you.

When you meet a person who seems shy and cold, say to yourself not, "What a disagreeable person," but, "I expect he (or she) is shy and lonely. I wonder what they are interested in and what I can do to make them warm up."

So many people are hungry for appreciation. Don't think they are deceitful. Think that they are just like yourself. They have their bad qualities and their good ones, and the chances are they are just as good as you, if not better.

This is my answer to you, little girl, who asked me not to publish your letter. And it is the answer to all you who cannot make friends.

"DEAR VIRGINIA LEE: I am 17 years old and deeply in love with a boy 23. We have been going together for six months, and have been going steady for three months. Now he wants to stop going steady and just have one or two dates a week. But I can't stand it to think of his going with other girls. What shall I do? BROKEN HEARTED."

If you are wise, my dear, you will welcome his suggestion with absolute enthusiasm, and, if you can manage to be "busy" on a night when he wants a date, you will be wiser still. You can't hold him by telling him that you can't give him up and can't bear to think of him going with other girls.

Imagine yourself going with a boy of whom you were tiring and trying to break off a bit, and think how bored you'd feel if he raved that he couldn't stand it and couldn't bear to think of you with other fellows. Wouldn't you just tell him that he'd HAVE to stand it, as you weren't going to be tied down to one friend at your time of life? Course you would.

You may lose him anyway, of course, but your safest course is to make yourself so interesting on your occasional dates and a bit inaccessible that he'll want to see more of you.

* * *

DOLL: If your husband drinks, won't work and abuses you, why not divorce him and make your own way in the world? As to this other man, you certainly don't want, as you say, to take a man away from his sick wife, so don't count him in.

Do you suppose a man who would not be true to his own wife would make a good husband? And how, in case this woman dies and you two marry, would the two families of children get along? You might find that you had jumped "out of the frying pan into the fire."

* * *

LONESOME LUKE: Maybe your brother found out where the girl lives and could tell you. If not and you know of no one who either knows her or who works where she does, write her a note addressed to her place of business.

Tell her that you are so and so's brother, and ask her if she remembers you. Then say that you would like to renew the acquaintance and ask if you may have a date.

PETER'S ADVENTURES

By MRS. FLORENCE SMITH VINCENT

SPIDER FEARS WHEN HE FINDS HE'S BEEN FOOLED

Peter hadn't been sitting very long on Mr. Spider's front porch when he began to feel just as Mr. Spider acted—a little bit drowsy. The sun was so warm and the breeze so pleasant that it is more than likely he would soon have been nodding if Mr. Spider had not roused himself and stared at Peter with all of the eyes on the side of his head toward the boy. And the grin that sent the shivers running up and down the boy's spine was still on Spider's face:

"By the way, stranger, since you are visiting me it seems high time you should tell me who you are. I seldom entertain a guest unaware and never before one whose name I do not know. What sort of an insect are you, anyhow? You look strangely like some one I have seen upon a time but who, I can't quite recollect—drat my memory! I can't depend on it at all."

Peter giggled at the idea of being taken for an insect.

"I'm a boy," he laughed. "Of course you've met the likes of me before. And because I am who I am, is the reason I'm so proud of myself for working my way up here. I'll bet I'm the very first Two-Legs who ever climbed the lacy ladder to sit in a Spiders' web."

Spider's eyes seemed ready to pop out of his head. And the grin had changed to grimace that came near to making Peter laugh out of the other side of his mouth. Spider was angry, very angry. There wasn't any doubt about it.

"A boy!" buzzed he. "Good gracious, land alive! The very idea of my being so stupid as to have been so far taken in by your pleasand manner as to allow you on my front porch. Boy, boy. I detest the very name. Hateful creatures, your sort are—always pulling off Spider's legs or tearing down our houses or destroying our front porches! Cause us heaps of trouble, boys do! Why only last week a boy stepped on my poor sister when she was out for a crawl and squashed her, flat!" The fuzz on Spider's back bristled.

"By the long legs of my grandfather, if I had guessed you were a boy I would have bitten you I believe I will now!" Spider faced Peter and the boy could see the fangs in the front of Spider's head. Peter was a bit frightened.

"Don't bite me, Spider, I beg you. I am a boy, but I am not cruel. I didn't try to pull off your legs nor destroy your web. Come now, didn't I watch my step so I shouldn't harm a thread of it?" Spider nodded.

"That you did," agreed the fellow. "But how can I be sure I can trust you? For all I know, maybe the reason why you didn't try to harm me is because you are so small. Come to think of it, it's your size that fooled me."

BIBLE THOUGHT FOR TODAY

THE GREAT TEACHER—And seeing the multitudes, Jesus went up into a mountain: and when he was set, his disciples came unto him: And he opened his mouth, and taught them:—Matthew 5:1, 2.

EXPECTING MUCH OF DAWES

The reception that Ambassador Dawes is receiving in Great Britain is gratifying. The newspapers are giving him much attention. Their majesties are gracious, as Americans have always found them. The prime minister, with whom General Dawes will come into closer contact, is much cordial. This was not unexpected. Great Britain seems to have been awaiting Ambassador Dawes' coming with an impatience born of the hope that he can do much to lessen the tension that has developed between it and his own country.

Anglo-American history unquestionably will be made during his official residence at the court of St. James. There is abundant material to work with. The paths of the United States and Great Britain cross at many points. Ambassador Houghton once pointed out that the differences between the two countries are as natural and as inevitable as squabbles among our own states. They need not be dangerous to peace. The controversy now attracting most attention is over naval strength. That even is amendable to common sense. The Geneva parley failed because it never rose above a dispute between experts over technical details. Statesmanship must step in and define the objective to be sought. The task of the naval experts is then to figure out how it may best be attained.

A great deal is expected of the happy coincidence of Mr. Hoover's administration with the return of Mr. MacDonald to office in Great Britain. They share a passion for peace and good will founded on an intelligent appreciation of the social and economic value of harmony. They are likely to seek it with a minimum of circumlocution. As a liaison officer between two such men, General Dawes has an assignment in which his temperament and training can be made to serve the cause in which they are enlisted.

COST OF MORAL BANKRUPTCY

The net cost of the federal government of nine years of prohibition enforcement is $213,178,485, as Commissioner Doran reckons it. A wet estimate of the annual cost of prohibition enforcement to the nation is $936,000,000. Anyone else is welcome to his own guess. What is less a matter of figure juggling than the cost of enforcement is the cost of non-enforcement. This country is rich enough to finance the enforcement of all its laws. The question which sooner or later it must answer is how long it can afford to foot the bill for non-enforcement of those laws, with its increasingly menacing items of more crime and less respect for authority. A nation morally bankrupt is worse off than one with an empty treasury.

The more Al Smith watches and considers, the more resigned he must be to the outcome of the last general election.

BO-BROADWAY

By JOSEPH VAN RAALTE

NEW YORK—The Three White Sisters came from a small midwest town four years ago with a neat little act.

They thought it was good. So did Fred Stone. He put them in his 1926 show and kept them there for the 1927 season. In all likelihood they'd be with him yet; but the following year one of the White Sisters was married to Joe Cisto (it's Joe, not Joseph), millionaire Wall Street broker.

Then there were only Two White Sisters.

The Two White Sisters went into vaudeville and in the latter part of 1928 a White Sister was married to Sydney Kent, millionaire general manager of Paramount Picture Corporation.

Then there was only One White Sister.

The One White Sister carried on her lonesome stage career until a few days ago, when she was married to Robert Kane, millionaire motion picture producer, and at present general manager of Pathe Picture Corporation.

So three Hum Town gals made good, while back in the Old Place all Maw an' Paw have to do is set back an' boast about their three millionaire sons-in-law.

Following is an antiquated salary list of Weber and Fields' Music Hall, when that inimitable Temple of Burlesque and Bacchus was in its heydey, thirty years ago:

Lillian Russell, $1,250.
De Wolf Hopper, $1,000.
Joe Webber, $200.
Lew Fields, $200.
Fay Templeton, $400.
Pete Daly, $298.
David Warfield, $250.
Ross & Fenton, $250.
Julian Mitchell (stage manager), $200.
John T. Kelly, $187.50.
Bessie Clayton, $150.
George Ali (animal impersonator), $75.
Bonnie Maginn (leading chorus girl), $50.
Moyer Sisters, $40.
Mabel Barrison, $35.
Frankie Bailey (she of the legs), $25.
Twenty-four chorus girls, a total of $480.

John Stromberg (composer), $150.

One vaudeville headliner today receives more money than the cost of entire show.

Slumming parties to the "Last Coast of Bohemia" in Hoboken are dead.

Midnight parties on outgoing transatlantic steamships are fast disappearing.

Broadway's night clubs are in the doldrums.

The steamship parties were overdone by hordes of revelers who swarmed over the vessels, violating even the privacy of the passengers and on occasions sleeping off excessive libations in the berths of open staterooms.

Hoboken is dead because Chris. Morley closed The Black Crook, not before George Jean Nathan wised up the Park Avenue slummers that the beer they were supposed to enjoy in nearby German gardens was no more orthodox than the price.

Night clubs always fade in hot weather, so the town's gone Rip Van Winkle.

A negro boy in the Candler Building entered the office of Gene Leonard, who does the talking for General Talking Pictures, seeking permission to use the mimeograph machine. Gene, who is a good hearted scout offered to run off the copy. The lad handed him a much edited screed wherein members of an Ebony and Ivory lodge were notified of funeral services for a departed brother to be held 'twelve days from date."

"Isn't twelve days quite a long time to keep a defunct brother?" queried Gene.

"Nussah, Misto Gene, yo' got it wrong. De brudder didn't jes' die. He croaked las' April, but we didn't git our uniforms till yistiddy!"

THE WAY of the WORLD

By GROVE PATTERSON

WHAT GOVERNMENT MIGHT DO

A resolution recently introduced in the U. S. senate calls for the appointment of a committee to make an investigation looking toward the cure of cancer. The public health service and the National Academy of Sciences would be directed to co-operate. This is a far more sensible and constructive resolution than most of those which are introduced for the purpose of bringing about investigations. For government to recognize the curse of cancer and to prepare to co-operate with the scientific forces which are trying to better the condition of mankind is for government to be constructive and to set itself seriously at great tasks.

NEVER TO FORGET

News dispatches tell us that former service men in one military home have filed suits for a half million dollars against the government, seeking compensation for injuries received during the World war. The details of these suits have not been widely published, but the thought of able-bodied men and women who look back to the victory of the war and who contemplate the broken bodies of thousands of young men deprived by that war from the normal activities of a happy life, is to hope that the men win their suits. We who are left can not do too much for those who gave so freely in a noble sacrifice.

MOVING UP THE PATH

When we read that representatives of 5,500 Congregational churches have voted unanimously to unite with the general convention of the Christian church we realize that civilized men and women have moved another step up the long path of history. And it is up the path and not down. The movement of men for whole generations may seem uncertain, trivial and purposeless, but over the long run of years it is a movement upward.

As far as possible men should unite in their attitude toward the Creative Power of the universe and toward the establishment of their ideals.

LEGISLATION DECLARED INADEQUATE TO SOLVE FARM PROBLEM

By JOHN KETCHAM
Congressman From Michigan

(John Clark Ketcham was born at Toledo, O., Jan. 1, 1873. He was graduated from high school at Hastings, Mich. He taught in high school from 1892 to 1899. From 1899 to 1907 he was county commissioner of schools, Barry county, Mich. He was postmaster of Hastings from 1907 to 1913 and master of Michigan State Grange from 1912 to 1920. He was elected to congress in 1921 from the fourth Michigan district and is now serving his fourth term. He is a Republican).

Legislation can never be a cure-all for the ills of agriculture.

All classes of our people understand that lasting progress and prosperity cannot come to the nation unless all groups share in it. Without argument it will be admitted that since the World war agriculture has not come back to economic equality with the rest of our people either actually or relatively. Farm people constitute 25 per cent of our national wealth, but their annual income is but 1 per cent of the total.

Farmers produce for market annually $12,500,000,000 worth of food and raw materials. Their purchasing power exceeds 30 per cent of the total of the nation. Depression in agriculture, therefore, immediately registers adversely in commerce and industry—hence the general interest in the farmers' economic welfare.

The universal demand for farm legislation has theretofore developed quite naturally. We Americans have great confidence that legislation will solve our problems. It must be remembered, however, that federal legislation can meet but a few of the difficult farm problems. Farm taxation is mostly a state and local matter. Standards of living are not subject to legislation. Organization of farmers is far short of that of other groups. Legislation may encourage it but cannot compel it.

In short, the personal element has always been the largest factor of success in agriculture as in everything else. All the legislation which the wisest minds can frame, added to ideal farm conditions, will not bring success to a farmer who has not the elements of success within himself.

On the other hand it is equally futile to say that federal legislation can do nothing in the way of relief. Through the power of organization, other groups have secured legislation which has proven of economic advantage. No one will dispute the fact that labor legislation in the last 10 or 15 years has been instrumental in lifting the scale of wages two and one-half times what it was in pre-war days. Similarly transportation rates have increased. Federal legislation has made these advantages possible for particular groups, and it is but natural that agriculture should make its appeal, and congress is now attempting to answer it.

To stumble twice against the same stone is a proverbial disgrace.—Cicero.

THE SPORT OF 'KINGS'

HOW TO ACHIEVE BEAUTY

By MME. HELENA RUBINSTEIN

How to be beautiful though traveling is a problem that faces every woman at some time, and usually, in the summer. Summer week-end trips, excursions to the mountains and seashore, journeys by train, by boat, or even, now, by airplane, take up a goodly share of many vacation days.

Of course you must keep freshly groomed and dainty during all these days of travel, in spite of sun and dust and heat. And you can, very easily, although it may seem difficult, at first, pack the various toilet articles and beauty preparations to which you have grown accustomed.

One idea should dominate your beauty travel kit—the idea of simplicity. You must reduce to the lowest terms the number of items you will take, being very sure, nevertheless, to include all those that are necessary.

The following list states the essentials for any summer journey. For the short trip you may use small sizes of jars and bottles of these preparations, if your packing space is limited. For a longer vacation journey it is wisest to go well stocked with generous sizes, for often the stores at mountain or seashore resorts carry incomplete or deficient lines.

A water softener, in bath salts or crystal form; a cleansing cream, bath soap, deodorant, talcum powder, eye wash, clearing or bleaching cream, skin-toning lotion, face powder, rouge, lipstick, eye make-up.

The water softener comes first because changes of water can be so unpleasant to your skin. If you like you can make one for yourself, using 12 ounces of sodium bicarbonate to 2 ounces of borax. This being in powder form packs easily, and a few spoonsful added to your water for bathing or washing will soften it pleasantly.

For your cleansing cream you will want either a light cleansing cream and massage cream, if your skin is dry, or a pasteurized cream. The latter can serve two uses since it makes an excellent preventive of lines and wrinkles when patted in around your eyes before going out of doors.

Your skin-toning lotion also serves a double purpose, since it acts as a skin tonic, firming the skin against possible lines and creepiness, and at the same time forming a powder base. It may also be used as a quick cleanser and freshener when your face feels warm and dusty.

A cream rouge is the best solution of your rouge problem, for you can use it as lipstick, too. And since it is waterproof you can wear it on all occasions, knowing that salt water and perspiration will not easily affect your color.

If you plan to be out of doors much of the time during your vacation, you should include also a sunproof lotion or cream to guard your complexion against the burning and tanning effects of the sun. Otherwise the list I have given you should be enough.

There are pieces of beauty luggage which you can buy all fitted with the necessary preparations, and you will find any one of them a traveling convenience since they utilize every bit of space in the most efficient way, and, too, prevent any danger of leakage. You can slip one of them—they come in either bag or box form—all fitted into your suit case or trunk, or you can carry it as an underarm purse and so have your beauty aid at hand whenever you need them.

BEHIND THE SCENES IN WASHINGTON

By CHARLES P. STEWART

WASHINGTON. — Survivors of the Tom L. Johnson political school are as scarce today — well, perhaps not as scarce as live dodos, but as scarce as okapi, anyway.

If the Smithsonian regents realized that a fine sample of this almost extinct species actually is to be found in congress, undoubtedly they would clap him into the national museum—or turn him over to Dr. Ales Hrdlicka, the famous anthropologist, to study as a rare specimen.

Yet it's a fact — Representative Robert Crosser of Ohio — Cleveland, where Tom Johnson dwelt for years — and raised heck with the vested interests —though Tom L. was a steel magnate, himself, before he turned radical—as radical, by gosh! as Thomas Jefferson —Bob Crosser is a Tom Johnson Democrat, as sure as congress meets on Capitol Hill.

Tom Johnson's statue — Tom L. has been dead this decade or more, but his statue still occupies a corner in the central square in Cleveland—but I imagine it will be necessary to identify him to most of the present generation, in order to make it clear what a queer bird a congressman must be who believes in the Tom Johnsonian political and economic philosophy now.

Tom L. Johnson, then, was an apostle of the "rights of man."

He was a Democrat (also a democrat, with a little "d") 24 carats fine — as compared with 18 and 12 carat alloys, and even the synthetic article — which pass muster in a large proportion of cases these times.

Being what he was, Tom naturally was an unqualified free trader —no Democratic protectionist or tariff-for-revenue-only-ite.

Having had, as a steel magnate, considerable tariff experience, the things he said on the subject during a term he served in congress, created no end of a scandal in Washington — but that was a long while ago.

Later, as mayor of Cleveland, he fought for public ownership of big utilities. He built a municipal street car line, indeed, and did his best to jam 3-cent fares down the private system's throat, though I've forgotten whether he succeeded or not.

More "ultra" yet, he was a convert to Henry George-ism — the single tax on land values—long since as dead a doctrine in this country as a doornail—except in Pittsburgh.

Representative Crosser was of Tom Johnson's following in his youth, and there are traces of this training in his conversation even today.

Perhaps he is not as vehement a free trader as Johnson was.

"I can see," he admits, "that an infant industry may need a certain amount of help to put it on its feet —to the advantage of all concerned."

(The way I recall it, Tom Johnson once said substantially the same thing; adding, however, that "when the infant threatens to get up and kick your head off if you stop rocking the cradle," he considered it mature enough to take care of itself.)

"But, supposing that an industry does need assistance," continues Crosser, "it seems to me it would be much better to call it out-and-cut subsidy, instead of disguising it as a tariff.

"People who are taxed to develop some enterprise while it is young and struggling, are pretty certain to complain vociferously if the tax is continued long after it is obvious that it is paying its own way —and a huge profit besides.

"Under our protective tariff system the public does not find this out, and is mulcted indefinitely, for the benefit of folk who do not deserve help a small fraction as much as the rest of us do."

"As for the single tax," observed the congressman, "it is true that the idea does seem dead here, outside the city of Pittsburgh, which is making very satisfactory progress toward its realization.

"Yet we must bear in mind that it is gaining ground rapidly in some other parts of the world.

"As its advantages begin to become more and more evident abroad, fresh shoots from the old roots are certain to spring up again throughout the United States."

Let's have supper on the porch or in the yard. Here are recipes for a number of unusual sandwiches, a good salad and delicious cookies.

Today's Recipes

Watercress Sandwiches—Ground watercress, parsley and some of the winter vegetables, and also grated orange rind, may be used in butter fillings for sandwiches. Wash watercress and drain it thoroughly. Then, using the nut knife of the food grinder, grind up enough watercress to fill a cup. Save a few of the best sprigs of cress for decorating the sandwiches or the plate on which they are served. Blend this with about half a cup of well-creamed butter until it makes a smooth spreading mixture and season with about a fourth teaspoon of salt. Only one liberal spreading, on the under part of each sandwich, is necessary to distribute the butter filling, so the sandwiches are very quickly made.

Parsley Butter Filling — Parsley butter is made like watercress, with the addition of two tablespoons of lemon juice to each cup of ground parsley and each half cup of creamed butter. Carrots, raw cabbage and celery may all be ground up, seasoned and mixed with butter for fillings in about the same proportion — two parts of the vegetables to one of butter.

Orange aSndwiches — Open-face orange sandwiches are made by spreading a mixture of equal parts of grated orange rind and butter on thin sandwich bread, cut in fancy shapes. No cover slices are used. When these butter mixtures are stored in a cold place, they must, of course, be worked again to a creamy consistency before spreading.

POISON IVY: A TRAGEDY

Picnic in the woods:

Young lovers a little detached from the others. "Oh! The pretty leaves! I just love leaves! Let's pick a bouquet of them," enthuses the beautiful girl. "Yes, let's. They are beautiful. Just like you, my sweet!" responds her gallant lover. Evening of the same day.

Bedroom of beautiful girl. Girl trying to go to sleep. Smarting, burning, itching, paining. Wonders how she could have sunburned enough to cause such intense discomfort.

Bedroom of gallant lover. G. L. comfortably going to sleep, happily murmuring: "How beautiful she is! How beautiful she is."

Next Day:

Bedroom of beautiful girl. A figure on the bed shaped like a human being, but scarcely recognizable as such. Face so swollen that eyes are fiery red surface. Hands, arms and legs the same. Evidence of considerable fever and great distress. Doctor at bedside. Diagnosis: Poison Ivy. B. G. begs news of her lover. Is he dying, too?

Later:

Lover, worried, but physically unscratched, entering the room of his lady with her mother. "My God," he murmurs, "can it be my Sweet? And how beautiful she was! How beautiful she was!

I have given this little tragedy, taken from real life before (and no doubt you know of many similar incidents), to bring out several facts of ivy poisoning: the character of the inflammation, the fever and illness, and the individual susceptibility. What the individual susceptibility depends upon, no one knows, so far as I can find out. Probably our old enemy, lowered resistance, and, possibly, inherited tendencies.

Dermatitis Veneata (Part 1)

Have you an inflammation of the skin which looks like poison ivy, and still you are confident that you have not come in contact with it? I'll give you a little lesson on Dermatitis Veneata, and it may solve your whole problem.

Under the title Dermatitis Venenata are included all of the inflammatory conditions of the skin due to contact with caustics, drugs, plants and many other substances. The most frequently causes are chemicals and certain hair tonics and dyes. Many things are more or less irritating to all skins, but in some the inflammation may be so marked and extensive that we have to think they have a peculiar susceptibility to the irritant, known as an idiosyncrasy.

Workers who have to handle sugars, flours, polishing materials, pastes, tobacco and similar objects, may be subject to dermatitis venenata, also surgeons and nurses whose hands are more or less constantly in contact with strong antiseptic solutions for sterilizing purposes.

So if you have an inflammation of the skin, see if you cannot ferret out some irritant with which you come in contact.

During the season, the rhus plants bring the largest number of cases of D. V. to the clinics. These plants are the rhus toxico-dendron (poison ivy), a climbing plant; rhus poison oak, a small tree or shrub, and poison sumac. When Mah Jongg firsst come into high favor, there were several cases of D. V. in susceptibles from the lacquer on the boxes which contained the sets, as these are made of a varnish from the resin of the rhus plants of Japan and China.

Among other plants that may cause eruptions are the nettle, primrose, smartweed, balm of Gilead, and even tomato plants.

Tomorrow: Dermatitis Venenata (Part 2).

LIVING AND LOVING

By MRS. VIRGINIA LEE

I have discoursed so often in this column about friendliness begetting friendliness, that it seems to me that it has become a sort of refrain. But every day I get letters wailing "I have no friends. How can I make them?"

You certainly can't make friends by walking haughtily past people you know without speaking. And you won't win people to you if you think they are deceitful and never trust them.

"People think I am conceited and stuck-up," one of my correspondents writes. Well, dear, wouldn't you think people were "conceited and stuck-up" if they walked past you with their noses in the air, and never vouchsafed a word? I would, and I'm a very friendly soul.

Get this into your head, little girl. You are not the only lonely soul in the world. There are many, and all are looking for some one who is friendly, sympathetic and understanding. When they find that one they are going to love them dearly. You should be interested, not so much in getting a friend for yourself, but in being a friend to someone that may need you.

When you meet a person who seems shy and cold, say to yourself not, "What a disagreeable person," but, "I expect he (or she) is shy and lonely. I wonder what they are interested in and what I can do to make them warm up."

So many people are hungry for appreciation. Don't think they are deceitful. Think that they are just like yourself. They have their bad qualities and their good ones, and the chances are they are just as good as you, if not better.

This is my answer to you, little girl, who asked me not to publish your letter. And it is the answer to all you who cannot make friends.

* * *

"DEAR VIRGINIA LEE: I am 17 years old and deeply in love with a boy 23. We have been going together for six months, and have been going steady for three months. Now he wants to stop going steady and just have one or two dates a week. But I can't stand it to think of his going with other girls. What shall I do? BROKEN HEARTED."

If you are wise, my dear, you will welcome his suggestion with absolute enthusiasm, and, if you can manage to be "busy" on a night when he wants a date, you will be wiser still. You can't hold him by telling him that you can't give him up and can't bear to think of him going with other girls.

Imagine yourself going with a boy of whom you were tiring and trying to break off a bit, and think how bored you'd feel if he raved that he couldn't stand it and couldn't bear to think of you with other fellows. Wouldn't you just tell him that he'd HAVE to stand it, as you weren't going to be tied down to one friend at your time of life? Course you would.

You may lose him anyway, of course, but your safest course is to make yourself so interesting on your occasional dates and a bit inaccessible that he'll want to see more of you.

* * *

DOLL: If your husband drinks, won't work and abuses you, why not divorce him and make your own way in the world? As to this other man, you certainly don't want, as you say, to take a man away from his sick wife, so don't count him in.

Do you suppose a man who would not be true to his own wife would make a good husband? And how, in case this woman dies and you two marry, would the two families of children get along? You might find that you had jumped "out of the frying pan into the fire."

* * *

LONESOME LUKE: Maybe your brother found out where the girl lives and could tell you. If not and you know of no one who either knows her or who works where she does, write her a note addressed to her place of business.

Tell her that you are so and so's brother, and ask her if she remembers you. Then say that you would like to renew the acquaintance and ask if you may have a date.

PETER'S ADVENTURES

SPIDER FEARS WHEN HE FINDS HE'S BEEN FOOLED

Peter hadn't been sitting very long on Mr. Spider's front porch when he began to feel just as Mr. Spider acted—a little bit drowsy. The sun was so warm and the breeze so pleasant that it is more than likely he would soon have been nodding if Mr. Spider had not roused himself and stared at Peter with all of the eyes on the side of his head toward the boy. And the grin that sent the shivers running up and down the boy's spine was still on Spider's face:

"By the way, stranger, since you are visiting me it seems high time you should tell me who you are. I seldom entertain a guest unaware and never before one whose name I do not know. What sort of an insect are you, anyhow? You look strangely like some one I have seen upon a time but who, I can't quite recollect—drat my memory! I can't depend on it at all."

Peter giggled at the idea of being taken for an insect.

"I'm a boy," he laughed. "Of course you've met the likes of me before. And because I am who I am, is the reason I'm so proud of myself for working my way up here. I'll bet I'm the very first Two-Legs who ever climbed the lacy ladder to sit in a Spiders' web."

Spider's eyes seemed ready to pop out of his head. And the grin had changed to grimace that came near to making Peter laugh out of the other side of his mouth. Spider was angry, very angry. There wasn't any doubt about it.

"A boy!" buzzed he. "Good gracious, land alive! The very idea of my being so stupid as to have been so far taken in by your pleasand manner as to allow you on my front porch. Boy, boy. I detest the very name. Hateful creatures, your sort are—always pulling off Spider's legs or tearing down our houses or destroying our front porches! Cause us heaps of trouble, boys do! Why only last week a boy stepped on my poor sister when she was out for a crawl and squashed her, flat!" The fuzz on Spider's back bristled.

"By the long legs of my grandfather, if I had guessed you were a boy I would have bitten you I believe I will now!" Spider faced Peter and the boy could see the fangs in the front of Spider's head. Peter was a bit frightened.

"Don't bite me, Spider, I beg you. I am a boy, but I am not cruel. I didn't try to pull off your legs nor destroy your web. Come now, didn't I watch my step so I shouldn't harm a thread of it?" Spider nodded.

"That you did," agreed the fellow. "But how can I be sure I can trust you? For all I know, maybe the reason why you didn't try to harm me is because you are so small. Come to think of it, it's your size that fooled me."

Ruth Again Enshrined As Yankee Hero

SPORT SNAP SHOTS

FRAMED by Phil

Thanks to the once pulverized but now powerful Rotary nine, the race in the American Softball League has now developed into a dog fight.

After losing five straight games, Rotarians suddenly came to life and have spanked the league-leading Coates Barber Shop team twice in a row.

The activity of Rotarians has resulted in a triple tie for first place in that league between Coates, the Hooven and Allison Co. and the Post Office team. Each has won four games and dropped three.

The Rotary team recently revamped its lineup. Several of the G. A. R. members were given the gate and those who escaped came to the conclusion they had better start earning their pay checks so to speak.

The result has been a sudden form reversal and Rotary from now on is expected to prove tough opposition for the remaining three teams.

The collapse of Coates Barber Shop has been unusual. Coates won four straight games and has now lost three in a row, mainly because of weak hitting and poor fielding.

* * *

In the National League the Downtown Country Club, by virtue of six straight victories, has at last obtained undisputed possession of first place. The Harness Cigars, 1928 city softball champs, are trailing in second place one full game behind the leaders.

So far this season with the schedule more than one-third completed, the National League race has been strictly a two-team affair.

The Lang Chevrolet Co., on paper, sizes up as a team of much potential strength and one of the strongest in the circuit. Yet this club has lost four games, two each to the Downtowners and Harness, and seems unable to hit its stride. Three of the defeats met by Lang have been by one-run margins.

BABE PROVES HERO OF CRUCIAL GAMES WITH TWIN HOMERS

Yesterday's hero: Babe Ruth, whose home runs in the seventh and eighth innings of the second New York-Philadelphia game at New York gave the Yankees an even break in the first two games of the series.

There were two men on base both times and the six runs thus accounted spelled the difference between victory and defeat, the Yankees winning 8 to 3. The Athletics took the first game, 11 to 1, Lefty Grove holding the world's champions to seven hits.

Washington rallied in the eighth with three runs to win from Boston, 5 to 4, at Washington. It was a tought game for Ruffing to lose as he allowed the Senators only five hits.

Brooklyn finally turned the tables on Boston after three straight defeats, winning a 15-inning battle, 7 to 3. At the end of the first nine innings both teams had one run and both scored two more in the twelfth. Brooklyn's four in the fifteenth clinched the game.

New York made it four straight at Philadelphia with an 11 to 5 decision over the Phils. Continuing their heavy hitting which has been the feature of the series, the Giants totalled 18 safe blows off three Philadelphia pitchers.

No other games were scheduled in either league.

BAMBINO HITS TWO HOMERS TO ASSIST MATES SPLIT EVEN

Second Twin Bill Finds Teams Where They Started

NEW YORK, June 22.—Having packed about all the drama one afternoon of baseball could reasonably encompass into their opening double header, the New York Yankees and the Philadelphia Athletics resume hostilities in another twin bill today.

Honors have been even thus far in this critical mid-season series between the rivals for the American League flag. "Lefty" Grove and Wait Hoyt divided the laurels for their efforts on the mound in the first and second games respectively; Al Simmons and the once more mighty Babe Ruth shared the glory of individual prowess at bat; each team won a well deserved victory, the Mackmen taking the opener, 11 to 1, the Yankees the second game, 8 to 3.

Yesterday's record breaking throng—the greatest week day crowd that ever saw a mid-season ball game in this or any other city numbered 66,145, but today's turnout of fans threatened to exceed that figure.

One thing must be said for the Athletics as the series continues; they have given the lie to the belief that they hadn't the heart to fight the world's champions in a pinch. They proved that they are not out in front of the parade by seven and one-half games by any fluke.

But overshadowing even the great demonstration of heart and punch given by the Mackmen in the first game yesterday was the performance of the one and only Babe Ruth himself towards the close of the second game.

Back in the game after a serious illness, it took the Babe a number of trips to the plate to hit his stride but what strides he took, once he got under way. After going hitless against Grove in the opener and fanning with the bases filled in the first inning of the second game, Ruth heard the catcalls of the fans—strange sounds, indeed, in the ears of the monarch of swat—when he ambled to the plate in the seventh inning.

Then followed the first of the Babe's two homers, turning those shirt sleeved right field fans into so many thousand delirious devotees once more. And when Ruth did it again in the eighth, once more scoring two men ahead of him, he was back in first place in the hearts of his countrymen.

All misgivings as to the bambino's effectiveness following his illness were swept away by those two prodigious clouts. The Babe himself again—and so the Yankees still are in the pennant race.

The advantage today lay with the Mackmen, however. They had Rube Walberg, Jack Quinn, Ossie Orwoll and Ed Rommel ready for pitching duty, while the Yankees had only Pipgras, Zachary and Heimach, three doubtful performers.

Judging from what they showed in the first two games of the series, the A's still look like pennant winners. Since the teams broke even, the Philadelphians still have a lead over the Yankees of seven and one-half games.

ROTARIANS GET GOOD; DEFEAT COATES AIDED BY TRIPLE PLAY

Rotarians are grabbing the softball spotlight these days.

The American League cellar-dwellers have been miraculously transformed into a dangerous ball team.

The Rotary nine won its second game in a row Friday night at Cox Memorial Athletic Field (proof will be furnished upon receipt of a self-addressed stamped envelope) —and again it was at the expense of the league-leading Coates Barber Shop nine.

The score was 6 to 4 and for the second time Rotary dropped the Coates team into a three-cornered tie with the Hooven and Allison Co. and Post Office for first place.

The outstanding feature of the contest was a peculiar triple play executed by Rotary in the first inning—the first triple killing ever recorded in a softball game in Xenia.

In the last half of the opening round, with the bases thickly populated and none out, Smith drove a liner at Kimber, Rotary pitcher. The ball glanced off his arm and was caught by Baldner, third baseman, before it reached the diamond. All the runners were advancing for the next base and Baldner after touching the runner coming in to third finally went over and touched third, completing the triple play.

Not only that but Rotary turned in two more double plays in the succeeding innings.

Kimber blanked the Coates nine for the first six innings and meanwhile Rotary stalked him to a two-run lead, scoring one run in the second on a triple by Lang and McElree's single and another in the sixth when Lang reached second on an error, stole third and came home on a sacrifice fly by McElree.

In the seventh Rotary collapsed in the field and permitted Coates to tally three unearned runs and assume the lead. The trio of tallies came as a result of three straight errors and a hit by F. McCurran.

Rotary rallied in the eighth and chased four runs across the plate to win the game. Successive hits by Kimber, Lang, McElree and Ervin accounted for the runs. With two out in the last of the ninth Coates threatened to tie up the score but the rally was nipped in time after one run was scored.

Kimber pitched a steady game for the winners and had three strikeouts to his credit. He limited Coates to ten hits. Wells, Coates hurler, released nine hits and also fanned three batters.

Kimber, Lang, McElree and Ervin each made two hits for Rotary. Stiles hit safely three times for the losers. Score:

OLD TIMERS TODAY

In Which George Stovall Writes About Base-Ball Stars Of Other Days.

By GEORGE STOVALL
Former Star Big League First Baseman and Former Manager Cleveland Indians, St. Louis Browns and Kansas City Federals, Written Especially for Central Press and The Gazette

Long before Babe Ruth, with his massive shoulders, spindly legs and tremendous wallop wrote big league history with a brutal (to pitchers) hand, there was a thin, short fellow by the name of Frank Baker with the Athletics.

Home Run Baker they called him. Home Run Baker—because he had the four-ply wallop to deliver when it was needed.

Today Baker is a farmer near gers. And, remember, Baker hits his home for many years. He hasn't been out of baseball so long, but his deeds, great in their day, are now dimly viewed through the dust kicked up by such slugging behemoths as Ruth, Lou Gehrig, Jimmy Foxx and the rest of that hefty tribe.

Baker, first of the home run kings, oddly enough was not of the traditional home run build. He hadn't the great shoulders and ponderous weight of today's sluggers. And, remember, Baker his his homers when there was no talk of a lively, springy ball and pitchers were allowed to use break deliveries, now illegal.

Baker was the third baseman on Connie Mack's "Million Dollar" infield, which had Jack Barry at short, Eddie Collins at second and Stuffy McInnis at first. There, folks was an infield, and when you tossed in Jack Coombs, Chief Bender and five or six others for good measure you can see why Mack's bunch ruled the American league and ruined the hopes of the other clubs.

Baker took a solid cut at the ball and managed to collect fifteen or twenty home runs each season at a time when every Tom, Dick and Harry wasn't stepping up to the plate and knocking a lively ball out of the park. Frank was the original "Home Run" king and a prime factor in the success of the Athletics.

The Federal league heads wanted to land Baker one year to add strength to the new circuit and they appointed me a committee of one to go down to Trappe in the off season to try to line up Mack's slugger for the Feds. I was managing the St. Louis Federals at that time. Well, I went down to Trappe all right, found Baker on his farm and gave him the Federal league offer. But Frank was tied up tight to an Athletic contract and my errand proved fruitless. He continues to swat his homers for Connie Mack.

WORK PROGRESSING ON NEW APARTMENTS BEING BUILT HERE

Work of remodeling the old Breen property at Second and West Sts. and the old Schlesinger residence on S. Detroit St., into modern apartment buildings is progressing satisfactorily, according to P. H. Flynn, who recently acquired both properties.

The brick residence at Second and West Sts., is being converted into five modern apartments, each containing three rooms and bath. Three apartments will be on the second floor and two on the lower floor. A modern heating plant is also being installed and the work is expected to be completed within the next three weeks.

Two L-shaped wings have been added to the Schlesinger residence, a frame house, making three in all, and when the remodeling work is finished, it is expected to be one of the most attractive apartment houses in the city. It will contain six apartments of three to four rooms each, three upstairs and three on the first floor. The property has a width of ninety-five feet and a depth of 185 feet. It will be completed in a month.

New fireproof roofs are being placed on both properties.

HENRY MASON DAY SENTENCED TO JAIL

WASHINGTON, June 22. — Chief Justice McCoy of the District Supreme Court today signed papers committing Henry Mason Day, associate of Harry F. Sinclair, oil baron, to jail for four months as a result of the Sinclair jury shadowing case.

Day, it was learned, will appear at the district jail Monday to begin his sentence.

Sinclair, now serving a three months sentence for contempt of the senate Teapot Dome investigating committee, received a six months jail term in connection with the case. His second sentence will run concurrently with the first beginning Monday. Without allowing time off for good behaviour the oil magnate would be released about Dec. 20.

W. Sherman Burns of the William J. Burns Detective Agency will pay his fine of $1,000 some time during the day, court attaches said.

STORE RE-OPENS

Lester J. Stiles, proprietor of Styles Shoe Store at 5 E. Main St., who made an assignment in Probate court last Monday for the benefit of creditors listing assets of $5,237.30 and liabilities amounting to $10,329.10, has re-opened the store at the same location. He was allowed a $500 exemption in lieu of a homestead.

Ruth Again Enshrined As Yankee Hero

SPORT SNAP SHOTS

FRAMED by Phil

Thanks to the once pulverized but now powerful Rotary nine, the race in the American Softball League has now developed into a dog fight.

After losing five straight games, Rotarians suddenly came to life and have spanked the league-leading Coates Barber Shop team twice in a row.

The activity of Rotarians has resulted in a triple tie for first place in that league between Coates, the Hooven and Allison Co. and the Post Office team. Each has won four games and dropped three.

The Rotary team recently revamped its lineup. Several of the G. A. R. members were given the gate and those who escaped came to the conclusion they had better start earning their pay checks so to speak.

The result has been a sudden form reversal and Rotary from now on is expected to prove tough opposition for the remaining three teams.

The collapse of Coates Barber Shop has been unusual. Coates won four straight games and has now lost three in a row, mainly because of weak hitting and poor fielding.

* * *

In the National League the Downtown Country Club, by virtue of six straight victories, has at last obtained undisputed possession of first place. The Harness Cigars, 1928 city softball champs, are trailing in second place one full game behind the leaders.

So far this season with the schedule more than one-third completed, the National League race has been strictly a two-team affair.

The Lang Chevrolet Co., on paper, sizes up as a team of much potential strength and one of the strongest in the circuit. Yet this club has lost four games, two each to the Downtowners and Harness, and seems unable to hit its stride. Three of the defeats met by Langs have been by one-run margins.

BABE PROVES HERO OF CRUCIAL GAMES WITH TWIN HOMERS

Yesterday's hero: Babe Ruth, whose home runs in the seventh and eighth innings of the second New York-Philadelphia game at New York gave the Yankees an even break in the first two games of the series.

There were two men on base both times and the six runs thus accounted spelled the difference between victory and defeat, the Yankees winning 8 to 3. The Athletics took the first game, 11 to 1, Lefty Grove holding the world's champions to seven hits.

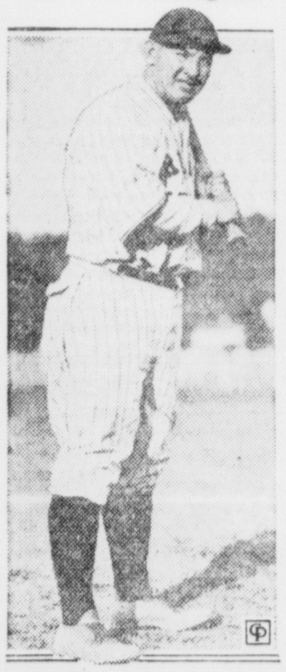

Washington rallied in the eighth with three runs to win from Boston, 5 to 4, at Washington. It was a tought game for Ruffing to lose as he allowed the Senators only five hits.

Brooklyn finally turned the tables on Boston after three straight defeats, winning a 15-inning battle, 7 to 3. At the end of the first nine innings both teams had one run and both scored two more in the twelfth. Brooklyn's four in the fifteenth clinched the game.

New York made it four straight at Philadelphia with an 11 to 5 decision over the Phils. Continuing their heavy hitting which has been the feature of the series, the Giants totalled 18 safe blows off three Philadelphia pitchers.

No other games were scheduled in either league.

BAMBINO HITS TWO HOMERS TO ASSIST MATES SPLIT EVEN

Second Twin Bill Finds Teams Where They Started

NEW YORK, June 22.—Having packed about all the drama one afternoon of baseball could reasonably encompass into their opening double header, the New York Yankees and the Philadelphia Athletics resume hostilities in another twin bill today.

Honors have been even thus far in this critical mid-season series between the rivals for the American League flag. "Lefty" Grove and Wait Hoyt divided the laurels for their efforts on the mound in the first and second games respectively; Al Simmons and the once more mighty Babe Ruth shared the glory of individual prowess at bat; each team won a well deserved victory, the Mackmen taking the opener, 11 to 1, the Yankees the second game, 8 to 3.

Yesterday's record breaking throng—the greatest week day crowd that ever saw a mid-season ball game in this or any other city numbered 66,145, but today's turnout of fans threatened to exceed that figure.

One thing must be said for the Athletics as the series continues; they have given the lie to the belief that they hadn't the heart to fight the world's champions in a pinch. They proved that they are not out in front of the parade by seven and one-half games by any fluke.

But overshadowing even the great demonstration of heart and punch given by the Mackmen in the first game yesterday was the performance of the one and only Babe Ruth himself towards the close of the second game.

Back in the game after a serious illness, it took the Babe a number of trips to the plate to hit his stride but what strides he took, once he got under way. After going hitless against Grove in the opener and fanning with the bases filled in the first inning of the second game, Ruth heard the catcalls of the fans—strange sounds, indeed, in the ears of the monarch of swat—when he ambled to the plate in the seventh inning.

Then followed the first of the Babe's two homers, turning those shirt sleeved right field fans into so many thousand delirious devotees once more. And when Ruth did it again in the eighth, once more scoring two men ahead of him, he was back in first place in the hearts of his countrymen.

All misgivings as to the bambino's effectiveness following his illness were swept away by those two prodigious clouts. The Babe himself again—and so the Yankees still are in the pennant race.

The advantage today lay with the Mackmen, however. They had Rube Walberg, Jack Quinn, Ossie Orwoll and Ed Rommel ready for pitching duty, while the Yankees had only Pipgras, Zachary and Heimach, three doubtful performers.

Judging from what they showed in the first two games of the series, the A's still look like pennant winners. Since the teams broke even, the Philadelphians still have a lead over the Yankees of seven and one-half games.

UPHOLD SUPERINTENDENT

GALLIPOLIS, O., June 22.—The state civil service commission has upheld Dr. G. G. Kineon, superintendent of the State Epileptic Hospital here who dismissed William Thivener, an attendant, on charges of using a strap to discipline patients. The commission held a formal hearing here. Thivener had appealed.

ROTARIANS GET GOOD; DEFEAT COATES AIDED BY TRIPLE PLAY

Rotarians are grabbing the softball spotlight these days.

The American League cellar-dwellers have been miraculously transformed into a dangerous ball team.

The Rotary nine won its second game in a row Friday night at Cox Memorial Athletic Field (proof will be furnished upon receipt of a self-addressed stamped envelope) —and again it was at the expense of the league-leading Coates Barber Shop nine.

The score was 6 to 4 and for the second time Rotary dropped the Coates team into a three-cornered tie with the Hooven and Allison Co. and Post Office for first place.

The outstanding feature of the contest was a peculiar triple play executed by Rotary in the first inning—the first triple killing ever recorded in a softball game in Xenia.

In the last half of the opening round, with the bases thickly populated and none out, Smith drove a liner at Kimber, Rotary pitcher. The ball glanced off his arm and was caught by Baldner, third baseman, before it reached the diamond. All the runners were advancing for the next base and Baldner after touching the runner coming in to third finally went over and touched third, completing the triple play.

Not only that but Rotary turned in two more double plays in the succeeding innings.

Kimber blanked the Coates nine for the first six innings and meanwhile Rotary stalked him to a two-run lead, scoring one run in the second on a triple by Lang and McElree's single and another in the sixth when Lang reached second on an error, stole third and came home on a sacrifice fly by McElree.

In the seventh Rotary collapsed in the field and permitted Coates to tally three unearned runs and assume the lead. The trio of tallies came as a result of three straight errors and a hit by F. McCurran.

Rotary rallied in the eighth and chased four runs across the plate to win the game. Successive hits by Kimber, Lang, McElree and Ervin accounted for the runs. With two out in the last of the ninth Coates threatened to tie up the score but the rally was nipped in time after one run was scored.

Kimber pitched a steady game for the winners and had three strikeouts to his credit. He limited Coates to ten hits. Wells, Coates hurler, released nine hits and also fanned three batters.

Kimber, Lang, McElree and Ervin each made two hits for Rotary. Stiles hit safely three times for the losers. Score:

OLD TIMERS TODAY

In Which George Stovall Writes About Base-Ball Stars Of Other Days.

By GEORGE STOVALL
Former Star Big League First Baseman and Former Manager Cleveland Indians, St. Louis Browns and Kansas City Federals, Written Especially for Central Press and The Gazette

Long before Babe Ruth, with his massive shoulders, spindly legs and tremendous wallop wrote big league history with a brutal (to pitchers) hand, there was a thin, short fellow by the name of Frank Baker with the Athletics.

Home Run Baker they called him. Home Run Baker—because he had the four-ply wallop to deliver when it was needed.

Today Baker is a farmer near Trappe. And, remember, Baker hits his home for many years. He hasn't been out of baseball so long, but his deeds, great in their day, are now dimly viewed through the dust kicked up by such slugging behemoths as Ruth, Lou Gehrig, Jimmy Foxx and the rest of that hefty tribe.

Baker, first of the home run kings, oddly enough was not of the traditional home run build. He hadn't the great shoulders and ponderous weight of today's sluggers. And, remember, Baker his his homers when there was no talk of a lively, springy ball and pitchers were allowed to use break deliveries, now illegal.

Baker was the third baseman on Connie Mack's "Million Dollar" infield, which had Jack Barry at short, Eddie Collins at second and Stuffy McInnis at first. There, folks was an infield, and when you tossed in Jack Coombs, Chief Bender and five or six others for good measure you can see why Mack's bunch ruled the American league and ruined the hopes of the other clubs.

Baker took a solid cut at the ball and managed to collect fifteen or twenty home runs each season at a time when every Tom, Dick and Harry wasn't stepping up to the plate and knocking a lively ball out of the park. Frank was the original "Home Run" king and a prime factor in the success of the Athletics.

The Federal league heads wanted to land Baker one year to add strength to the new circuit and they appointed me a committee of one to go down to Trappe in the off season to try to line up Mack's slugger for the Feds. I was managing the St. Louis Federals at that time. Well, I went down to Trappe all right, found Baker on his farm and gave him the Federal league offer. But Frank was tied up tight to an Athletic contract and my errand proved fruitless. He continues to swat his homers for Connie Mack.

WORK PROGRESSING ON NEW APARTMENTS BEING BUILT HERE

Work of remodeling the old Breen property at Second and West Sts. and the old Schlesinger residence on S. Detroit St., into modern apartment buildings is progressing satisfactorily, according to P. H. Flynn, who recently acquired both properties.

The brick residence at Second and West Sts., is being converted into five modern apartments, each containing three rooms and bath. Three apartments will be on the second floor and two on the lower floor. A modern heating plant is also being installed and the work is expected to be completed within the next three weeks.

Two L-shaped wings have been added to the Schlesinger residence, a frame house, making three in all, and when the remodeling work is finished, it is expected to be one of the most attractive apartment houses in the city. It will contain six apartments of three to four rooms each, three upstairs and three on the first floor. The property has a width of ninety-five feet and a depth of 185 feet. It will be completed in a month.

New fireproof roofs are being placed on both properties.

HENRY MASON DAY SENTENCED TO JAIL

WASHINGTON, June 22.—Chief Justice McCoy of the District Supreme Court today signed papers committing Henry Mason Day, associate of Harry F. Sinclair, oil baron, to jail for four months as a result of the Sinclair jury shadowing case.

Day, it was learned, will appear at the district jail Monday to begin his sentence.

Sinclair, now serving a three months sentence for contempt of the senate Teapot Dome investigating committee, received a six months jail term in connection with the case. His second sentence will run concurrently with the first beginning Monday. Without allowing time off for good behaviour the oil magnate would be released about Dec. 20.

W. Sherman Burns of the William J. Burns Detective Agency will pay his fine of $1,000 some time during the day, court attaches said.

STORE RE-OPENS

Lester J. Stiles, proprietor of Styles Shoe Store at 5 E. Main St., who made an assignment in Probate court last Monday for the benefit of creditors listing assets of $5,237.30 and liabilities amounting to $10,329.10, has re-opened the store at the same location. He was allowed a $500 exemption in lieu of a homestead.

"TWO-BITS" EXPLAINED

BOSTON, June 22.—Why is a quarter called "two bits?" Because a coin valued at 12 1-2 cents and used as legal tender in the early nineteenth century, was called a "bit," it was revealed in prices listed on a seventy-three year old menu of the Parker House which came to light here recently.

THE FLAT TIRE — A DRAB LITTLE MOTH FLIES TO HAPPINESS

By Alma Sioux Scarberry, Author of "Make Up" Etc.

© 1929 CENTRAL PRESS ASSN. INC.

READ THIS FIRST:

Vivian Matthews, shy and unhappy because she was a doorstep baby, is called a "flat tire" by the younger set of Bender. Kentworth Hillman Johns III, to secure his grandfather's fortune, offers her one hundred thousand dollars and a divorce in Paris at the end of a year if she will marry him and, secretly in love with him, she consents. In New York Vivian attracts Mann Barkow, famous artist, and he flys to Kansas to paint her. Aurelia "Dovie" Jansen, who jilted Kent to marry Count Von Popper in Paris, has returned mysteriously without her count. She has a frank talk with her mother about ways and means of getting Kent back into her net again.

While Vivian is posing in the stunning white flying outfit Barkow has brought her, Dovie calls at the house and is met and thoroughly upset by "Pat" Sullivan, Vivian's best girl friend and a former chorus girl.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

* * *

CHAPTER XVII

Mamma Jansen paced the library floor, biting her nails and smoking one cigarette after another waiting for Dovie to return from her visit to Vivian.

She leaped for her as she came in the door.

"Oh, honey, how did everything go?"

Dovie flung herself into a chair and mamma could see that things hadn't gone any too well.

Dovie exploded:

"He has given her everything in the world! Such clothes I've never seen. And the little fool has half a million dollars of his money already as a settlement."

Mrs. Jansen's face blanched.

"Who—who in the world told you that—her? I don't believe it!"

"No." Dovie struck a match vehemently on the bottom of her shoe and lit a cigarette. "She hasn't sense enough to say 'boo.' Patricia Sullivan was there. She told me before Vivian got back from Mann Barkow's. What do you think, mother, I can't believe it. But he came here from New York to paint her picture."

Mrs. Jansen sat. It was too much for her.

"Good Lord! She must have changed somewhat since I saw her."

Dovie's voice rose. Her nerves were rasping.

"Changed! I'll tell the world she has changed. But who wouldn't, with a million dollars worth of clothes and a French maid to dress her and keep her fixed up!"

They faced each other—mother and daughter, each waiting for the other to go on with the conversation. Finally Dovie rose savagely, her temper giving away and turned on her mother.

"For crime's sake don't sit there and look at me as though I could do anything about it! As though it is my fault. As for me I'm going back to Paris—the sooner the quicker."

Mrs. Jansen answered her with a short laugh.

"Yeah—what are you going to use for money, my precious?"

"We're not that broke!" Dovie cried out unbelievingly. "Don't be foolish!"

"We certainly have no way of getting to Paris and living for any length of time unless we get hold of some money. I knew we were living too high. But I wanted to see you make a brilliant marriage."

"Yes, always fall back on me for an alibi, dear mother."

Dovie thought suddenly of a story she had heard of a man who sold his home and searched the world for wealth and when he was an old man learned that his back yard had been discovered to be a great diamond mine. She didn't remember where she had heard it, but it struck her with considerable force. That is just what she had done.

Dovie flung herself out of the room had locked herself into her own bedroom. Anything to get away from her mother, with her rasping voice and her bitter tongue and always being reminded that every bad break the Jansen family ever had was because her mother was sacrificing for her. At times she did have a little feeling for the woman who brought her into the world, but at odd moments only, when on rare occasions things went smoothly for a time.

Mamma Jansen went to her own room and decided she had a severe headache. She put ice in a bag for her head and took a headache tablet. Then she lay down to think.

It was a wild idea! But necessity was necessity. And just as suddenly as Mrs. Jansen's headache had appeared it disappeared. She rose hurriedly and started to dress.

There would be just enough time to get down to Kent's office before he left! She would drive the car and let him think she drove in to have a mechanic go over it because it hadn't been driven for a few months.

Selecting her dress with especial care, discarding the later Parisian models for a costume becomingly motherly, Mrs. Jansen, dressed in soft gray, knocked on her daughter's door.

"Don't bother me!" Dovie called loudly.

"I'm going out for a little while, dear," her mother informed her, excitement in her voice. "I'll tell you about it when I come back."

"Don't make a bigger fool of yourself than you can help," was her daughter's ungracious reply.

Kent saw Mrs. Jansen driving in as he stood in the salesroom demonstrating a car to a customer. But he didn't have time to duck. Mrs. Jansen bore down upon him with arms outstretched.

"Kent, my boy—I'm SO glad to see you."

She has her nerve, he thought to himself, but held out his hand.

"How do you do, Mrs. Jansen. Anything we can do for you?"

She was a little taken aback. But she did not lose her poise.

"Why, I just dropped in to have the car gone over and see you for a moment. I want to have a little word with you—if you can spare the time."

Kent excused himself reluctantly and turned his customer over to one of the salesmen. He knew he might as well get it over with. So he led her into the office and proffered a chair.

For a moment Mrs. Jansen looked at Kent, twisting her handkerchief nervously before she plunged.

"Kent, dear boy, I don't know what you think of us. I had to come in to see you and find out—I—"

"What difference does it make what I think?" Kent asked her, and she saw that his voice was bitter. She liked that.

'I know. I know just how you must feel. But, I couldn't let my child suffer any longer, Kent. I had to come to you for her sake and ask if you wouldn't come over for just a few minutes this evening and let her explain—"

"There is nothing to explain," Kent said in a tone that should have terminated the interview, but Mrs. Jansen hung on desperately.

"Oh, yes there is! She is my little girl—and I can't see her suffer any more without seeing you and having a chance to tell her side of the story. I am a mother—you don't understand."

"Really, I don't see what can be done about it now," Kent answered icily, and started up. I was unpleasant.

"My dear boy, of course I am not asking you to do anything about it. Of course that is out of the question. I am just asking you to relieve my child's anxiety. She has grown so morose and pensive I worry about her health."

Kent was suddenly touched. His face softened a little. Maybe Dovie did care a little, after all. He hated himself for weakening, and his manner was uncertain as he ran his hand nervously through his curly hair.

Mrs. Jansen's voice was soft and sad.

"Kent, dear, you don't know what it has cost poor Dovie to come back to this little town and face all these people after what she has done! She came back just especially to see you. I don't believe she can ever stand to go back to the count. The minute she made that fool marriage she was like a girl in a dream—stunned. She came all this way—you owe it to her—she, she loves you."

All the old longing came over Kent again. Dovie—the only girl he had ever given a thought—came back all the way from Paris to ask his forgiveness. Just to ask his forgiveness. It was too much. And Kent was young.

Mrs. Jansen left the Johns Motor company, with its big salesroom, its garage and its smart offices, her face wreathed in smiles. She turned outside and took another look. It was a nice looking business place. She had never noticed what a prosperous appearance it made. Perhaps Kent made quite an income from his business beside what his grandfather had left him.

Dovie was amazed beyond words when her mother burst into her room.

"Get right up now and start fixing yourself up, pet. Who do you suppose is dating you up this evening? Kent Johns! He'll be here at seven-thirty." Dovie's eyes glistened.

* * *

Vivian was sitting in her boudoir window, and she could hardly believe her own eyes when she saw Kent cross the lawn and enter the Jansen yard through the garden.

For a moment she wanted to scream. Then slowly her mind began to function. That was no way to do. Beside her was the telephone. She picked it up and called Mann Barkow. Yes, he would be delighted to come and help her while away a lonely evening!

Attacks Reserve Board in Recent Money Operations

Upholds Prompt Action of Banker Mitchell as "Patriotism"

WILLIAM C. DURANT

THE fur is flying thick and fast since William C. Durant, noted financier, made his attack on the Federal Reserve Board. In a recent radio talk Durant branded the board as an "autocratic group" and stated that it has power "beyond that of any constituted authority of the United States."

The courageous capitalist did not, however, stop at generalities. He definitely accused the board of its efforts to curb speculation by restricting brokers' loans. Further, that this body is alone responsible for the prevailing high rates.

In considering the case of the farmer, the merchant, the cotton planter, and the manufacturer, Durant said that these men who constantly require capital for their undertakings, are paying outrageous and unnecessary penalties as a result of the iron hand of the Reserve Board.

Mr. Durant harked back to the 27th of March, when the discount rate leaped to 20 per cent., accusing the board of creating a situation where a panic was imminent. That in consequence, the action of Chas. E. Mitchell in offering $25,000,000 of National City Bank cash to distressed investors was a decidedly patriotic move.

But the speaker's talk did not entirely consist of destructive criticism. He suggested three steps to the board. First, a reduction of the rediscount rate to 3 per cent. Second, to put back $700,000,000 into the market, which the board's strategy had withdrawn. Third, to halt issuance of any securities which it is unwilling to have member banks accept as collateral.

To uphold his own theories Mr. Durant told of having asked 500 prominent industrialists to declare themselves for or against the board's policy. He stated that from 463 replies only a meager dozen had defended the Federal Reserve Board.

"TWO-BITS" EXPLAINED

BOSTON, June 22.—Why is a quarter called "two bits?" Because a coin valued at 12 1-2 cents and used as legal tender in the early nineteenth century, was called a "bit," it was revealed in prices listed on a seventy-three year old menu of the Parker House which came to light here recently.

THE FLAT TIRE

A DRAB LITTLE MOTH FLIES TO HAPPINESS

By Alma Sioux Scarberry, Author of "Make Up" etc.

© 1929 Central Press Assn. Inc.

READ THIS FIRST:

Vivian Matthews, shy and unhappy because she was a doorstep baby, is called a "flat tire" by the younger set of Bender. Kentworth Hillman Johns III, to secure his grandfather's fortune, offers her one hundred thousand dollars and a divorce in Paris at the end of a year if she will marry him and, secretly in love with him, she consents. In New York Vivian attracts Mann Barkow, famous artist, and he flys to Kansas to paint her. Aurelia "Dovie" Jansen, who jilted Kent to marry Count Von Popper in Paris, has returned mysteriously without her count. She has a frank talk with her mother about ways and means of getting Kent back into her net again.

While Vivian is posing in the stunning white flying outfit Barkow has brought her, Dovie calls at the house and is met and thoroughly upset by "Pat" Sullivan, Vivian's best girl friend and a former chorus girl.

* * *

CHAPTER XVII

Mamma Jansen paced the library floor, biting her nails and smoking one cigarette after another waiting for Dovie to return from her visit to Vivian.

She leaped for her as she came in the door.

"Oh, honey, how did everything go?"

Dovie flung herself into a chair and mamma could see that things hadn't gone any too well.

Dovie exploded:

"He has given her everything in the world! Such clothes I've never seen. And the little fool has half a million dollars of his money already as a settlement."

Mrs. Jansen's face blanched.

"Who—who in the world told you that—her? I don't believe it!"

"No." Dovie struck a match vehemently on the bottom of her shoe and lit a cigarette. "She hasn't sense enough to say 'boo.' Patricia Sullivan was there. She told me before Vivian got back from Mann Barkow's. What do you think, mother, I can't believe it. But he came here from New York to paint her picture."

Mrs. Jansen sat. It was too much for her.

"Good Lord! She must have changed somewhat since I saw her."

Dovie's voice rose. Her nerves were rasping.

"Changed! I'll tell the world she has changed. But who wouldn't, with a million dollars worth of clothes and a French maid to dress her and keep her fixed up!"

They faced each other—mother and daughter, each waiting for the other to go on with the conversation. Finally Dovie rose savagely, her temper giving away and turned on her mother.

"For crime's sake don't sit there and look at me as though I could do anything about it! As though it is my fault. As for me I'm going back to Paris—the sooner the quicker."

Mrs. Jansen answered her with a short laugh.

"Yeah—what are you going to use for money, my precious?"

"We're not that broke!" Dovie cried out unbelievingly. "Don't be foolish!"

"We certainly have no way of getting to Paris and living for any length of time unless we get hold of some money. I knew we were living too high. But I wanted to see you make a brilliant marriage."

"Yes, always fall back on me for an alibi, dear mother."

Dovie thought suddenly of a story she had heard of a man who sold his home and searched the world for wealth and when he was an old man learned that his back yard had been discovered to be a great diamond mine. She didn't remember where she had heard it, but it struck her with considerable force. That is just what she had done.

Dovie flung herself out of the room had locked herself into her own bedroom. Anything to get away from her mother, with her rasping voice and her bitter tongue and always being reminded that every bad break the Jansen family ever had was because her mother was sacrificing for her. At times she did have a little feeling for the woman who brought her into the world, but at odd momenis only, when on rare occasions things went smoothly for a time.

Mamma Jansen went to her own room and decided she had a severe headache. She put ice in a bag for her head and took a headache tablet. Then she lay down to think.

It was a wild idea! But necessity was necessity. And just as suddenly as Mrs. Jansen's headache had appeared it disappeared. She rose hurriedly and started to dress.

There would be just enough time to get down to Kent's office before he left! She would drive the car and let him think she drove in to have a mechanic go over it because it hadn't been driven for a few months.

Selecting her dress with especial care, discarding the later Parisian models for a costume becomingly motherly, Mrs. Jansen, dressed in soft gray, knocked on her daughter's door.

"Don't bother me!" Dovie called loudly.

"I'm going out for a little while, dear," her mother informed her, excitement in her voice. "I'll tell you about it when I come back."

"Don't make a bigger fool of yourself than you can help," was her daughter's ungracious reply.

Kent saw Mrs. Jansen driving in as he stood in the salesroom demonstrating a car to a customer. But he didn't have time to duck. Mrs. Jansen bore down upon him with arms outstretched.

"Kent, my boy—I'm SO glad to see you."

She has her nerve, he thought to himself, but held out his hand.

"How do you do, Mrs. Jansen. Anything we can do for you?"

She was a little taken aback. But she did not lose her poise.

"Why, I just dropped in to have the car gone over and see you for a moment. I want to have a little word with you—if you can spare the time."

Kent excused himself reluctantly and turned his customer over to one of the salesmen. He knew he might as well get it over with. So he led her into the office and proffered a chair.

For a moment Mrs. Jansen looked at Kent, twisting her handkerchief nervously before she plunged.

"Kent, dear boy, I don't know what you think of us. I had to come in to see you and find out—I—"

"What difference does it make what I think?" Kent asked her, and she saw that his voice was bitter. She liked that.

'I know, I know just how you must feel. But, I couldn't let my child suffer any longer, Kent. I had to come to you for her sake and ask if you wouldn't come over for just a few minutes this evening and let her explain—"

"There is nothing to explain," Kent said in a tone that should have terminated the interview, but Mrs. Jansen hung on desperately.

"Oh, yes there is! She is my little girl—and I can't see her suffer any more without seeing you and having a chance to tell her side of the story. I am a mother—you don't understand."

"Really, I don't see what can be done about it now," Kent answered icily, and started up. I was unpleasant.

"My dear boy, of course I am not asking you to do anything about it. Of course that is out of the question. I am just asking you to relieve my child's anxiety. She has grown so morose and pensive I worry about her health."

Kent was suddenly touched. His face softened a little. Maybe Dovie did care a little, after all. He hated himself for weakening, and his manner was uncertain as he ran his hand nervously through his curly hair.

Mrs. Jansen's voice was soft and sad.

"Kent, dear, you don't know what it has cost poor Dovie to come back to this little town and face all these people after what she has done! She came back just especially to see you. I don't believe she can ever stand to go back to the count. The minute she made that fool marriage she was like a girl in a dream—stunned. She came all this way—you owe it to her—she, she loves you."

All the old longing came over Kent again. Dovie—the only girl he had ever given a thought—came back all the way from Paris to ask his forgiveness. Just to ask his forgiveness. It was too much. And Kent was young.

Mrs. Jansen left the Johns Motor company, with its big salesroom, its garage and its smart offices, her face wreathed in smiles. She turned outside and took another look. It was a nice looking business place. She had never noticed what a prosperous appearance it made. Perhaps Kent made quite an income from his business beside what his grandfather had left him.

Dovie was amazed beyond words when her mother burst into her room.

"Get right up now and start fixing yourself up, pet. Who do you suppose is dating you up this evening? Kent Johns! He'll be here at seven-thirty." Dovie's eyes glistened.

* * *

Vivian was sitting in her boudoir window, and she could hardly believe her own eyes when she saw Kent cross the lawn and enter the Jansen yard through the garden.

For a moment she wanted to scream. Then slowly her mind began to function. That was no way to do. Beside her was the telephone. She picked it up and called Mann Barkow. Yes, he would be delighted to come and help her while away a lonely evening!

Attacks Reserve Board in Recent Money Operations

Upholds Prompt Action of Banker Mitchell as "Patriotism"

WILLIAM C. DURANT

THE fur is flying thick and fast since William C. Durant, noted financier, made his attack on the Federal Reserve Board. In a recent radio talk Durant branded the board as an "autocratic group" and stated that it has power "beyond that of any constituted authority of the United States."

The courageous capitalist did not, however, stop at generalities. He definitely accused the board of its efforts to curb speculation by restricting brokers' loans. Further, that this body is alone responsible for the prevailing high rates.

In considering the case of the farmer, the merchant, the cotton planter, and the manufacturer, Durant said that these men who constantly require capital for their undertakings, are paying outrageous and unnecessary penalties as a result of the iron hand of the Reserve Board.

Mr. Durant harked back to the 27th of March, when the discount rate leaped to 20 per cent., accusing the board of creating a situation where a panic was imminent. That in consequence, the action of Chas. E. Mitchell in offering $25,000,000 of National City Bank cash to distressed investors was a decidedly patriotic move.

But the speaker's talk did not entirely consist of destructive criticism. He suggested three steps to the board. First, a reduction of the rediscount rate to 3 per cent. Second, to put back $700,000,000 into the market, which the board's strategy had withdrawn. Third, to halt issuance of any securities which it is unwilling to have member banks accept as collateral.

To uphold his own theories Mr. Durant told of having asked 500 prominent industrialists to declare themselves for or against the board's policy. He stated that from 463 replies only a meager dozen had defended the Federal Reserve Board.

BRINGING UP FATHER — By GEORGE McMANUS

The Theater

Warner Bros., who scooped the movie industry by flooding the market with talkies before the other companies had started now seems to have scooped the world again with color pictures.

Warner Bros., almost on the financial rocks, made millions with sound pictures after the success of Al Jolson's "The Jazz Singer". While the other companies were trying to catch up with Vitaphone, Warners came out with "On With the Show", an all-color movie, bringing to the screen the first really distinctive and worth-while use of color in the celluloids.

* * *

Now the Warners further point out that they have taken all the Technicolor cameras on the market, "On With The Show" having been made with that kind of camera. They point out further that it takes six months to build a color camera, the ordinary type requiring three months in the making.

Taking advantage of their position, Warners now have "The Gold-Diggers of Broadway", another all-talkie, all-ocolor film, ready, and have a head start on two more "The Song of the West" and "Under a Texas Moon", "Golden Dawn" and "Tiger Rose" in colors are to go into production within a few weeks. They also intend to inject color sequences into some pictures already made, notably John Barrymore's "General Crank". The color pictures are much more expensive, "On With The Show", taking $200,000 extra for color.

Circuses have to play to huge crowds in order to come out financially because of the heavy expense of showing daily. When Ringling Bros. and Barnum and Bailey showed at Dayton this week the freight charge from Indianapolis cost approximately $1,200. The freight charge to Columbus from Dayton was about $900, making over $2,000 for the two jumps. From Columbus the circus goes to Toledo and then into Canada. It is the only five-ring circus in existence.

Rod La Rocque and Sue Carol are coming to the Orphium Wednesday, June 26, in "Captain Swagger", according to an announcement by Tommy Neville, impressario at the E. Main St., picture house.

The picture by Pathe has a war setting and some airplane photography that is considered among the best shown on the screen recently. Pathe found its production costs run up by the high cost of cracking up airplanes but went in for realism on a grand scale, let the expenses fall where they may.

Orphium patrons will find a smartly done action picture. Richard Tucker, Victor Potel and Ulrich Haupt support the principals in this offering.

Just a minute, girls, and we'll give you his name. Mr Anthony Bushell, a screen newcomer with a part in a forthcoming Jeanne Eagles picture.

The Theater

Warner Bros., who scooped the movie industry by flooding the market with talkies before the other companies had started now seems to have scooped the world again with color pictures.

Warner Bros., almost on the financial rocks, made millions with sound pictures after the success of Al Jolson's "The Jazz Singer". While the other companies were trying to catch up with Vitaphone, Warners came out with "On With the Show", an all-color movie, bringing to the screen the first really distinctive and worth-while use of color in the celluloids.

* * *

Now the Warners further point out that they have taken all the Technicolor cameras on the market, "On With The Show" having been made with that kind of camera. They point out further that it takes six months to build a color camera, the ordinary type requiring three months in the making.

Taking advantage of their position, Warners now have "The Gold-Diggers of Broadway", another all-talkie, all-ocolor film, ready, and have a head start on two more "The Song of the West" and "Under a Texas Moon", "Golden Dawn" and "Tiger Rose" in colors are to go into production within a few weeks. The Greene County Agricultural Society is offering special premiums aggregating $560 to be distributed in seven prizes for the best general display of agricultural and horticultural products by the granges of the county. A. B. Lewis will be in charge of the Grange exhibit, which is confined to Greene County and will be judged August 8.

The new plan recognized at the Ohio Fair Manager's meeting in Columbus to stimulate the various granges to make better displays was to put the amount of money awarded to each place on a percentage basis. To meet this and still make a just award the fair board has seen fit to raise the various premiums. First premium will be $120; second, $100; third, $80, and fourth, fifth, sixth and seventh, $65 each on this percentage basis.

The fair board will give prizes totalling $900 in the department of Boys' and Girls' 4-H Club exhibits. Other patrons of this department are offering prizes aggregating $120.

An elimination contest will be held at the fair to select the winning individual and team demonstrators in food, clothing, livestock, livestock judging, style show and health contestant. Each winning team with the leader will be sent to the state fair.

Delegates to club week will be selected on the same basis as last year. Each organized club in the county will nominate its delegate out of which the county delegates will be selected. Each county may send one delegate for each sixty members or major portion thereof enrolled. The department will pay the expenses of the delegates.

The 4-H Pig Club is outlined in three demonstrations of approved practices in pig raising and swine management.

The annual livestock parade, in charge of F. B. Turnbull, N. N. Hunter and W. C. Smith, will take place before the grandstand Friday, August 9 at 10:30 a. m. All horses and cattle that have competed for prizes will be required to participate in this parade, which will consist of the boys' and girls' club floats and livestock, organization floats and livestock exhibits. Prizes totalling $55 will be awarded in the parade for beef breed and dairy breed displays and organization floats.

A team pulling contest to take place in front of the grand stand at 10:30 a. m. August 8 for teams weighing more than 3,000 pounds and another August 9 at 9:30 a. m. for teams weighing under 3,000 pounds, is an added feature this year. Prizes in both classes will total $70 and there will be four prizes in each contest.

A dynamometer to test the pulling capacity of teams has been obtained from Ohio State University and will be at the fair on the days of the contests.

In all departments of livestock, poultry, sweepstakes and in the seventh and eighth departments entries will close Saturday, August 3 at 9 p. m.

Entries close at noon August 6 for the usual inter-county quoit tournament to be held at the fair August 7 and 8, commencing each day at 10 a. m. Any organized quoit club is eligible to compete. ANNOUNCE COMPLETE PROGRAM FOR CHAUTAUQUA JULY 6 TO 12

Announcement is being made of the complete program for the annual Redpath Chautauqua in Xenia July 6-12, inclusive.

Headed by Joseph Rotkvich, the Tamburica Orchestra, a group from Jugo-Slavia, will officially open the program with a popular concert in the afternoon. In the evening of the opening day, the tamburica group will again appear preceding a lecture-demonstration on "Science and the Future," by Dr. Hilton Ira Jones, who illustrates how industry has found a fairy godmother in science and will take the audience on an imaginary trip into the future. His lecture is said to throw new light on modern scientific products.

From the Yakima reservation in the state of Washington comes Chief Nipo Strongheart, the man who was featured in the Cecil B. DeMille motion picture, "Braveheart," and who will appear in the picturesque costume of his tribe to tell the story of a vanishing race on the afternoon of chautauqua's second day.

That evening, a metropolitan cast will present the comedy-drama "Three Wise Fools," by Austin Strong. A lawyer, a banker and a doctor are among the central figures. The play was first produced by John Golden and ran for a year at the Criterion Theater in New York City. It was also a hit in London and Australia.

On the afternoon of the third day a concert will be presented by the Geisha Girls Quartet and Waldo E. Stephens will deliver a lecture on "Facts and Fiction in Our Foreign Affairs." Many chautauqua patrons will recall the lecture by Mr. Stephens on the 1924 program. He has just returned from another year of study and observation in Europe and will discuss international affairs.

The world's best known "Madame Butterfly" will come to the chautauqua in the evening of the third day in the person of Madame Tamaki Miura, Japanese soprano, and her company. She has been featured with the Chicago, San Carlo and Manhattan opera companies and has made concert tours in many foreign lands. In her program she will be assisted by the geisha girls and other associate artists.

Appearing with Fern Casford in her program of character sketches on the afternoon of the fourth day will be three talented instrumentalists. Their numbers will include familiar classics and popular modern diversions in costumes.

This company will also furnish entertainment in the evening after which Captain "Dinnie" Upton, who was a captain in the air service and an athletic coach and is known as the "big brother to a hundred thousand kids," will give a lecture. Playgrounds, community houses and other tributes bear testimony to the practical work which "Dinnie" has done for the young folks of America and other lands.

"Making a New China" is the subject of a lecture to be given by No Yong Park, Chinese author and humorist, on the afternoon of the fifth day. His books include "The Revolt of China" and "Oriental Wit and Humor."

In the evening the New York comedy success, "Skidding," a comedy of domestic life and politics, which began a New York run more than a year ago and is still to be seen at the Bayes Theater, 44th and Broadway, will be presented.

A double program will be offered on chautauqua's closing afternoon. The first part will consist of a Junior Town revue and the second part will give an opportunity for some twenty boys and girls to work with S. S. Henry in a program of mysterious magic.

Magic, spirit paintings, shadow pictures and brilliantly lighted designs in colored sand will be combined by Henry and Co. in their program on chautauqua's closing night.

Chautauqua sessions begin promptly at 3 p. m. and 8 p. m. each day unless otherwise announced. The junior chautauqua sessions will be held at 9 a. m.

DeMille motion picture, "Braveheart," and who will appear in the picturesque costume of his tribe to tell the story of a vanishing race on the afternoon of chautauqua's second day.

That evening, a metropolitan cast will present the comedy-drama "Three Wise Fools," by Austin Strong. A lawyer, a banker and a doctor are among the central figures. The play was first produced by John Golden and ran for a year at the Criterion Theater in New York City. It was also a hit in London and Australia.

On the afternoon of the third day a concert will be presented by the Geisha Girls Quartet and Waldo E. Stephens will deliver a lecture on "Facts and Fiction in Our Foreign Affairs." Many chautauqua patrons will recall the lecture by Mr. Stephens on the 1924 program. He has just returned from another year of study and observation in Europe and will discuss international affairs.

The world's best known "Madame Butterfly" will come to the chautauqua in the evening of the third day in the person of Madame Tamaki Miura, Japanese soprano, and her company. She has been featured with the Chicago, San Carlo and Manhattan opera companies and has made concert tours in many foreign lands. In her program she will be assisted by the geisha girls and other associate artists.

Appearing with Fern Casford in her program of character sketches on the afternoon of the fourth day will be three talented instrumentalists. Their numbers will include familiar classics and popular modern diversions in costumes.

This company will also furnish entertainment in the evening after which Captain "Dinnie" Upton, who was a captain in the air service and an athletic coach and is known as the "big brother to a hundred thousand kids," will give a lecture. Playgrounds, community houses and other tributes bear testimony to the practical work which "Dinnie" has done for the young folks of America and other lands.

"Making a New China" is the subject of a lecture to be given by No Yong Park, Chinese author and humorist, on the afternoon of the fifth day. His books include "The Revolt of China" and "Oriental Wit and Humor."

In the evening the New York comedy success, "Skidding," a comedy of domestic life and politics, which began a New York run more than a year ago and is still to be seen at the Bayes Theater, 44th and Broadway, will be presented.

A double program will be offered on chautauqua's closing afternoon. The first part will consist of a Junior Town revue and the second part will give an opportunity for some twenty boys and girls to work with S. S. Henry in a program of mysterious magic.

Magic, spirit paintings, shadow pictures and brilliantly lighted designs in colored sand will be combined by Henry and Co. in their program on chautauqua's closing night.

Chautauqua sessions begin promptly at 3 p. m. and 8 p. m. each day unless otherwise announced. The junior chautauqua sessions will be held at 9 a. m.

Touring speeds are negotiated with such smooth, silent, effortless ease that you almost forget there's a motor under the hood. And when the throttle is opened wide on the highway—the pace is faster than the most experienced driver would care to maintain!

Back of this exceptional performance is a brilliant array of engineering advancements—typified by a high-compression, non-detonating cylinder head . . . automatic acceleration pump . . . hot-spot manifold . . . semi-automatic spark control . . . and a heavier crankshaft, statically and dynamically balanced.
